Lease-Lend Bill Advocates Fail To Limit Debate

Clark Blocks Proposal To Speed Vote on British Aid Measure

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP)—Administration forces, working desperately to obtain a vote on the Lease-Lend bill by this week-end failed today in an initial effort to limit debate on the measure.

Senator Clark (D-Mo.) blocked a proposal by Chairman George (D-Ga.) of the Senate Foreign Relations committee that the Senate agree unanimously to limit future speeches on the bill itself to one hour each, and speeches on amendments to a half hour.

Clark and Senator Wheeler (D-Mont.) said they had not filibustered against the bill, but added that it was a measure of such great importance there should be no limitation on debate.

Wheeler Sees Uprising
"I don't wonder that some of the proponents of this bill would like to see it jammed through at the earliest possible moment," Wheeler declared, "because they know as I do that when the people understand it there will be a tremendous uprising over the country against it."

Earlier, Senator Glass (D-Va.) had suggested that the Senate im-

Roosevelt Ties Up Bulgaria's American Assets

"Freezing" Order Not Extended to Other Nations As Expected

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP)—President Roosevelt signed an order tonight freezing all Bulgarian funds in the United States.

In spite of strong intimations from the treasury that the president might extend freezing orders to the other Axis nations or even to the entire world, the president's order pertained only to the little kingdom occupied by Germany during the week-end.

The treasury has been in favor of a general freezing order for some time, but has been opposed by the state department on certain points.

Other Orders Not Signed
It was learned authoritatively that at the time the president signed the order for Bulgaria, alternative blank orders were on his desk which would have frozen the funds of all nations, but apparently he decided at least to defer action on the others.

The order affects funds of both the Bulgarian government and Bulgarian citizens. The Bulgarian order freezes less money than any of the previous orders. About $4,500,000,000 was tied up in orders freezing funds of France, Holland, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Luxembourg, Rumania, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania.

The treasury, officials indicated, would not give up the campaign for a general freezing order. The Bulgarian situation was used only in an effort to get such action, it was explained.

Sofia Fascists Demand Territory Held by Neighbors

Much Larger Bulgaria Is Aim of Shouting Crowd in Capital

SOFIA, Bulgaria, March 3 (AP)—An old nationalist aim of a vastly bigger Bulgaria, to take in territory now held by Greece, Yugoslavia and Albania, was revived today by shouting native Fascists made bold by the presence of German troops rapidly filling the country and pouring to the Grecian and Turkish frontiers.

BULGARIA SIGNS WITH AXIS POWERS

British Bombers Pound Coast of Occupied France

Star Shells and Tracer Bullets Watched from Across the Channel

LONDON, March 3 (AP)—For a second successive night, British bombers pounded the coast of occupied France tonight in a sweep from Boulogne to Dunkerque.

Searchlights, star shells and tracer bullets sent up by German defense at the occupied ports provided a spectacle for watchers from the English side of the channel.

While the RAF waged its offensive, sirens in London signaled the approach of German raiders.

In Berlin, Germany announced she had sent planes over Wales which has been subjected to heavy raids recently.

Concentrates on Brest
The British attack was a follow-up of last night's which concentrated on Brest. There, the air ministry reported, sticks of bombs were poured on a German cruiser.

Again, as in previous assaults aimed at the cruiser—suspected commerce raider—returning pilots reported that they almost certainly had damaged the warship, whether by a direct hit or near explosions.

The docks, it was stated, were heavily hit and fires were raging. The Calais and Rotterdam docks also were bombed in the night.

On the defensive side, the day in Britain was relatively quiet, but this evening German planes flew in at high altitude to attack several points along the southeastern coast.

Patterson Lists Plants Where Strikes Halt Work On U. S. Defense Orders

Declares Employees in 21 Places, a Total of 40,200, Lost 120,000 Man Days' Last Week

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP)—Robert Patterson, undersecretary of war, reported today that there were work stoppages last week due to labor disputes in twenty-three plants producing for the army.

The total of workers involved in twenty-one of the plants was 40,200. Patterson said he did not know the number in the other two plants. He said the number of "man-days" lost was 120,000.

Patterson gave the House Judiciary committee this list of affected plants, numbers of workers out, days lost during the week (through Friday), and the war department's interest.

Allis Chalmers, Milwaukee, 7,800 workers, five days; manufacturers turbines for QMC (Quartermaster Corps) tractors for ordnance and turbine generators for Radford (Va.) powder plant.

American Woolen Mills, Fulton, N. Y., 170 workers, one day; manufactures shirting for QMC.

One Day For Steel Workers
Bethlehem Steel, Lackawanna, N. Y., 12,000 workers, one day; large contracts with ordnance division for special steel.

B. H. Aircraft, New York City, 100 workers, five days; manufactures aircraft parts.

Alliance "Does Not Lead To Consolidation of Peace, but To Extension of the Sphere of War" Soviet Foreign Commissariat Declares; Moscow Will Not Support Move

LONDON, March 4 (Tuesday) (AP)—The well-informed British Press Association said today that Russia's disapproval of Bulgarian policy in admitting German troops was "not expected to presage action" on Russia's part.

The Press Association said Russia made "a mere verbal protest," and concluded:

"Those in close touch with the Balkan situation have yet to be convinced that it presages any action on the part of the U. S. S. R."

"They instance the fact that she chooses to inform Bulgaria and not Nazi Germany of her dislike of German troops in Bulgaria."

MOSCOW, March 3 (AP)—The Soviet foreign commissariat informed Bulgaria today that Russia "cannot share the opinion of the Bulgarian government as to the correctness of the latter's position" in granting admission to German troops.

The communication to Bulgaria, handed to her minister at Moscow, expressed disapproval on the grounds that Bulgaria's action "does not lead to consolidation of peace but to extension of the sphere of war and to Bulgaria being involved in it."

WILL NOT SUPPORT BULGARIA
"In view of this the Soviet government, true to its policy of peace, cannot render any support to the Bulgarian government in the application of its present policy."

"The Soviet government is compelled to make the present statement especially in view of the fact that the Bulgarian press freely circulates rumors fundamentally misrepresenting the real position of the U.S.S.R."

The text of the Russian note and an outline of events leading up to it were issued by Tass, official Russian news agency.

The note was delivered to the Bulgarian envoy by vice commissar of foreign affairs Andrei Y. Vishinsky.

Tass said that on Saturday in Sofia the Bulgarian foreign office informed the Russian minister that Bulgaria had given her consent to entrance of German troops, "having in view preservation of peace in the Balkans."

Differ over Peace Views
"It was on 'preservation of peace' that Russia sharply differed with Bulgaria. Bulgaria long had looked to Russia for guidance in foreign policy."

The text of the Tass communique follows:
"On March 1, a representative of the ministry of foreign affairs of Bulgaria, Altynoff, made a statement to the U. S. S. R. minister in Bulgaria, Lavrishev, that the Bulgarian government gave its consent to dispatch of German troops to Bulgaria, having in view preservation of peace in the Balkans."

"On March 3, deputy people's commissar of foreign affairs Vishinsky conveyed to the Bulgarian minister, Stamenoff, the following reply:
"In reply to a communication of the Bulgarian government conveyed March 1, this year, through the minister of the U. S. S. R. in Bulgaria,

Challenge Bulgarian Views
"First: The Soviet government cannot share the opinion of the Bulgarian government as to the correctness of the latter's position in this matter since it is a position, irrespective of the desire of the Bulgarian government, which does not lead to consolidation of peace but to extension of the sphere of war and Bulgaria being involved in it."

ATHENS, March 3 (AP)—Top war leaders of Britain and Greece conferred secretly here today on topics which close observers said embraced expansion of British aid to Greece in the event German troops invade her from Bulgaria.

Anthony Eden, British foreign secretary, and General Sir John G. Dill, chief of the Imperial general staff, were cheered by Athenians on the streets, and newspapers expressed their welcome.

Having conferred until late Sunday with Premier Alexander Korizis and King George II, they were welcomed today with the king, Korizis, Generalissimo Alexander Papagos and other Greek government and military leaders.

concerned the Turkish position in the Balkan situation on the basis of talks Eden had in Ankara before flying here yesterday.

Eden also saw United States minister Lincoln MacVeagh.

Eden was accorded a front-page greeting in English by the newspaper Asymatos.

Authorized sources said that the troops sent into Bulgaria Saturday when that nation joined the three-power pact were not an occupation force controlling Bulgarian affairs but merely designed to protect Bulgarian interests against alleged British threats.

Greeks Not Disturbed
Informed quarters declared that the movement was accomplished without "disturbing" Greek frontiers. They also stressed the existence of the Bulgarian-Turkish non-aggression pact which in some quarters is viewed as a guarantee that Turkey is passive to the Bulgarian situation.

Reports from Istanbul that a "high German official" is going to Ankara to confer with Turkish statesmen met the rejoinder here: "We have an ambassador there which obviates the necessity of sending other emissaries."

Delaware House Refuses To Repeal Blue Laws; More Arrests Threatened

WILMINGTON, Del., March 3 (AP)—While Delaware's court machinery staggered under the weight of hearings for 493 Sunday blue law violators, the state House unanimously passed a resolution today condemning wholesale enforcement of the law.

The House held that it "will not be coerced or told by any fellow officers or department what it shall do" and resolved it will "take its time" in deliberation on a bill to repeal the 200-year-old law.

At the same time, Attorney General James R. Morford, who yesterday directed an unprecedented number of arrests of persons "engaged in worldly employment on the Sabbath," asserted:

"Each Sunday will grow worse until the laws are amended."

World War Laws To Halt Strikes Again Proposed

High Washington Official Seeks To Prevent Work Stoppages

(By The Associated Press)

A suggestion for re-enactment of World War strike-prevention machinery came from a high war department official yesterday (Monday) as a strike of craftsmen developed at an army construction project employing 15,000.

"There should be no strikes and no stoppages," Robert Patterson, undersecretary of war, told the House Judiciary committee. He had related that there were work stoppages last week due to labor disputes in twenty-three plants producing for the army. As a result, he said, 120,000 "man-days" of work were lost.

Patterson proposed establishment of a group similar to the twelve-man war labor board organized by President Wilson in 1918. This board was composed of five labor, five industry, and two public representatives.

Established by Wilson

Its anti-strike activities were based on conciliation and voluntary compliance by labor and management with its suggestions. President Wilson established it by executive order, and Patterson said he thought this was preferable to strike-control measures instituted by legislation.

The undersecretary of war said there had been fewer delays to production due to labor disputes in 1940 than in 1939, but was emphatic that work stoppages must be eliminated for the duration of the "emergency."

The scene of the new strike that developed yesterday was Camp Davis, N. C., where an anti-aircraft firing range is being built. The strike was called by AFL craftsmen to back up a demand for a preferential shop under which union men would have first call on job vacancies. L. H. Rouse, business agent for the Wilmington, N. C., Building Trades Council, said 5,000 workers decided on the walkout. About 15,000, including many who are unskilled and non-union, are employed on the $15,000,000 project.

Mentions Milwaukee Strike

In the course of his testimony, Patterson mentioned as a matter of particular concern the six-weeks old strike at the Allis-Chalmers Manufacturing Company, Milwaukee. Among the plants $45,000,000 in defense orders are machinery for powder plants. A demand by the CIO-United Automobile Workers for a union shop is understood to be the principal issue in the dispute which has kept about 8,000 men idle.

Government officials were continuing behind-the-scenes efforts to promote settlement of this dispute, and were actively endeavoring to settle strikes at four International Harvester Company plants and Ford Motor Company factories.

James P. Dewey, federal conciliator, seeking a basis for mediation, asked statements from the Ford management and the CIO-United Automobile Workers. The union has charged the company with unfair labor practices, which the company denied.

Movies of Two Sports To Feature Program At K. of C. Tonight are publicly singing the Macedonian revolutionary songs despite a ban imposed by the government led to speculation as to what is to happen to the cabinet of Premier Bogdan Philoff.

German troops already had reached the Greek frontier today at a point only sixty-five miles from Salonika and others were heading for the Turkish border.

During the day the United States legation prepared two protests to the Bulgarian government:

1. Over the refusal of the Bulgarian military to allow U. S. Minister George H. Earle to cross into Yugoslavia Saturday.
2. Over the arrest of Boris Yaneff, a Bulgarian subject and an employee of the Chicago Daily News who was taken from his home Friday and remains inexplicably missing.

The legation expressed particular concern that the arresting officers were reported to have taken an American flag from Yaneff's home "as evidence."

It also was announced here that the secretary of the U. S. military attaché to Rumania, Col. John P. Ratay, had been sent to concentration camp along with other Rumanian men and women with American and British connections.

Bronx Housewife Found Murdered

Mrs. Elizabeth Jensen Strangled to Death with Necktie

NEW YORK, March 3 (AP) — A thirty-four-year-old Bronx housewife was found garrotted to death by a necktie today in a manner similar to that which caused the death of another Bronx woman a few weeks ago.

The office of assistant Chief Inspector John J. Ryan said the dead woman was Mrs. Elizabeth Jensen, whose body was found on a couch in the living room of a basement apartment. Her husband, Carl, is a waiter in a night club.

Several weeks ago the scantily clad body of Mrs. Catherine Pappas, Egyptian born housewife, was found lying on a bed in the Pappas apartment. She had been strangled by a necktie. Her slayer still is sought.

May Be Two Slayers

Despite the similarity of the cases, District Attorney Samuel Foley expressed the view the slayings—which occurred about three miles apart—were not the work of the same man on the basis of preliminary investigation. Detectives checked the story of a fifteen-year-old neighboring girl who said she had been trailed for several blocks during the afternoon in that vicinity by a "tall, thin man in a gray overcoat." He went away when she reached her home," she said.

A friend of Mrs. Jensen's, Mrs. Mary Graff, found the body, fully clothed, stretched out face upward on the couch. Under the lower part of her body was spread a striped Turkish bath towel.

Woman's Neck Scratched

Her neck bore scratches, but otherwise there was nothing to indicate a struggle or criminal assault, police said. In a bureau drawer was $179 in cash, presumably rent collections from the apartment building, for which Mrs. Jensen was superintendent. A heel-less shoe was found in the apartment foyer.

The Jensens' dog, snapping viciously, was found locked in a closet, supposedly put there by Mrs. Jensen before she opened the door—a custom she usually followed, friends said, because of the dog's bad temper.

Local Mail Carrier Is Reported Missing

Local police yesterday were asked to pick up Sterling H. Wyatt, 34, of 819 Columbia avenue, city mail carrier, who has been missing since Saturday when his car was found abandoned at the corner of Harrison and George streets.

Wyatt is married and has two children.

He is a son-in-law of Baird A. Wolford, forman at the local post office and has been employed as mail carrier for about ten years. When last seen Wyatt wore a dark grey dapple suit, dark tan slouch hat, brown oxford and grey zipper sweater. He is six feet tall and has brown hair.

Nazi Raiders Use New "Chandelier Flare"

LONDON, March 4 — (Tuesday) — (AP) — German raiders, employing a new "Chandelier Flare" which bursts into additional brilliancy when struck by anti-aircraft shells, heavily attacked northwest England and a town in South Wales tonight.

The British, describing the new flare, said it consisted of a main orange section which appeared to be strung on a cable of white lights extending below and above the main flare.

It remained stationary for a quarter of an hour. Then British anti-aircraft guns fired and the flare burst into thousands of smaller lights which the authoritative press association said had a "brilliant effect."

British Extending Somaliland Gains

(By The Associated Press)

CAIRO, Egypt, March 3 — British imperial forces pursuing their cleanup in Italian Somaliland have struck eighty miles northeast of Mogadiscio, along the coast of the Indian ocean, to occupy Villaggio Duca degli Abruzzi, middle eastern headquarters announced here today.

The town—literally the village of the Duke of Abruzzi—is on the rail route from Mogadiscio, the captured Somaliland capital and principal port, is an agricultural center.

In Italian Eritrea, where the British were declared to have smashed through a guarded mountain pass protecting the strategically important town of Cheren, RAF bombers were said to have attacked the Fascist positions while Italian African fliers machine-gunned Italian emplacements and troop concentrations.

In Libya and Ethiopia, said the British command here, there was no change in the situation.

WEEK-END BURGLARS SOUGHT BY POLICE

One Cumberland office was robbed and a break-in attempted at another establishment sometime early Sunday morning, police reported last night.

Four dollars in stamps and seventy-five cents in coins were taken from the office of the Metger Brothers Sand and Gravel Company, rear of the Algonquin hotel, between noon Saturday and Monday morning, when the burglary was discovered by Henry Shriver when he came to his office.

Entrance was obtained by the robbers by throwing a rock through the office door and turning the night latch. All the desks were thoroughly ransacked, but no papers were taken.

Officer C. D. Manges investigated the case.

The unsuccessful burglary attempt was made at the Schafer Independent Oil Company, 1 Fayette street, where a rock was thrown through the office door glass, but no entrance was made. The attempted break-in was discovered yesterday morning when William H. Schafer, owner and manager, came to the office.

Evidently the same person or persons were involved in both the robbery and attempted entrance because of the similarity of methods used, police said.

Mrs. Lewis has asked for an absolute decree and that her maiden name of Dorothy Mae Klavuhn be restored to her.

Miss Murray is scheduled to give an address on "Modern Newspaper Make-up."

The grand finale of the New York convention will be a banquet Saturday, March 15.

Mayor Wants To Know Why Officer Did Not Report Accident

Mayor Irvine yesterday remarked "something is wrong gentlemen" when informed that Patrolman Thomas T. Griffin knew practically nothing about a sledding accident January 30 in which Paul Lewis, son of Bernard F. Lewis, of 840 Cephart drive, was injured.

The investigation was started when parents of the boy sent the city a bill of $81.50 for medical and hospital fees.

According to Irvine, Griffin was assigned to the beat on which the accident occurred at Gephart drive. Griffin, in a written report, said he was on duty at Gephart drive and Fayette street all evening but was told by a girl who seemed to know little about it, that there had been a sledding accident.

The boy was said to have struck a parked car and was taken to the hospital.

The reports were referred to Charles Z. Heskett, city attorney.

The overnight sweep was a continuation of a widespread offensive over German territory on Sunday and yesterday which the ministry announced, a 2,000-ton vessel was torpedoed amidsthips in an assault on a German convoy in the North Sea.

One commentator suggested that a possible explanation of London's recent relative immunity from air raids was the German air force's increasing attacks on convoy and on British ports.

This, he added, was "a notable if only a temporary change" in Nazi policy, adding that a scheme of close cooperation between the Luftwaffe and a new fleet of submarines was "being brought into operation in an effort to starve this country into submission."

Five Firms Get Small Orders To Make Gas Masks

Placed by Government as Precaution against Possible Needs

WASHINGTON, March 3 (AP) — "Educational orders" designed to train five firms to make civilian type gas masks were awarded today by the war department, which also announced plans to build a $1,000,000 factory to produce charcoal for masks.

The government-owned charcoal factory, to be erected at Fostoria, Ohio, will be operated by the National Carbon Company. Charcoal is used in the masks to absorb harmful gases.

The army gives small so-called "educational orders" to factories in order to familiarize them with manufacture of a product which it may want to order in quantity later.

Those for gas mask went to the Kemper-Thomas Company, Cincinnati, $12,500; Sprague Specialties Company, North Adams, Mass., $6,250; Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Company, Detroit, $6,250; Pittsburgh Store and Fixture Company, Blairsville, Pa., $6,250; B. K. B. Company, Los Angeles, $6,250.

The masks, costing less and differing in some respects from those issued to men in the armed services, were described as designed to provide protection against gas for non-combatants remaining in areas under military jurisdiction and control.

The war department added that the mask "provides protection against all known war gases in the same manner as does the service gas mask issued the troops but is not designed for the long life and rugged use of the service gas mask."

Bulgaria Is Armed Camp

BULGARIA—Bulgaria, more than ever, looked like a great German camp—an encampment of men with somewhere else to go.

Field Marshal Sigmund List, commander-in-chief of Hitler's Balkan armies, had moved his headquarters to Sofia. Seven divisions of Bulgarians' freshly mobilized army were massed at the Turkish frontier.

Advance guards of the German army reached the Greek frontier at four points early today.

Bulgaria's Black Sea ports of Varna and Burgas were completely in Nazi hands. The latter is only 120 miles from the Bosphorus gateway of the Black Sea and Istanbul.

British quarters expected the British minister, George W. Rendel, to ask for his mission's passport tomorrow, formally marking a break in diplomatic relations, presumably to be followed up by RAF warplanes.

Three Courses for Greece

Greece — Anthony Eden, Britain's touring foreign minister, and his traveling mate, General Sir John Dill, chief of the British imperial general staff, were in Athens, concerned over Greece's reaction to the presence of German forces on the Bulgarian frontier.

Greece appeared to have three courses: (1) admit British imperial land force in addition to the RAF which has been helping her fight the Italians in Albania, (2) make the best possible quick peace with Italy under pressure of the German threat or (3) continue the fight on the present basis. The last was the thinnest of possibilities.

Yugoslavia May Sign

Yugoslavia — Premier Dragisa Cvetkovac and Foreign Minister Aleksander Cernomarkovic conferred at length with Regent Prince Paul after the premier hastened to Belgrade by plane from his home province.

Authoritative quarters said the talks concerned the possibility of Yugoslavia's joining the Axis and some declared she was on the verge of signing up.

Yugoslavia offers an even more feasible route than Bulgaria for German armies entering Greece.

Five warplanes, identified as British, flew high over a corner of Rumania's oil fields, apparently enroute to the oil fields, causing explosions and huge fires. Germany's strict control of Rumania made confirmation of such reports almost impossible.

There were reports yesterday that fleets of British bombers swooped in on Rumania's German-controlled Ploesti oil fields, causing explosions and huge fires. Germany's strict control of Rumania made confirmation of such reports almost impossible.

Briggs asserted that the United States should "say to these three gangster pirates (Germany, Italy and Japan) that we will not be cowed by them and their threats, that we intend to live as free men in a free world and to give every aid within our power to those nations who have a like desire and the courage, faith and hope to resist totalitarian enslavement."

Briggs, who often has opposed administration policies, told the chamber that the United States is "the ultimate core of the resistance to the new world order," which he said was sought by the Axis powers.

Briggs urged that the administration, once the British Aid bill is passed, give aid to all countries "which are being attacked by outlaw dictator nations."

Senator Reynolds, making his second major address on the bill, said that he had no intention of participating in a filibuster but added that "there is a great distinction between a filibuster and legitimate discussion of any legislation."

Reynolds suggested three amendments to the bill—to forbid aid to Russia, to deport Harry Bridges, west coast labor leader, and to prohibit "Communists, Fascists or Nazis" from holding government jobs.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

Nazi strategy has scored heavily of avoiding incidents that could turn Bulgaria from a passive to an active ally of the Axis.

It has been British habit over the years to count on the outcome of the last, not the first, battle. Even if the Greeks yielded to Nazi pressure and made peace with Italy, that could not strip the British of the power to make two-front war on their Nazi foe. It would not, for example, break the choke-hold of British sea power on Italy. Only a major German war effort to crash the Dardanelles could seriously imperil Britain's hold on the eastern Mediterranean.

Hitler May Lose in East

Hitler has repeatedly made it plain that he expects to win the war with Britain in the west, not the east. He could lose it in the east, however, and seems trying now to salvage Italy without risking too much on the Balkan front. It is pressure politics he is using against Greece, backed by a formidable military parade through Bulgaria, calculated to be awe inspiring.

Yet a comparative lull in the Nazi air attack on England indicates the price the Nazis are paying. Berlin dare not reduce the heavy air concentration in the Balkans to augment the air attack on England.

Reports that the Royal Air Force has already struck there seem premature. There can be little doubt, however, that such a British counter attack is fully expected in Rumania, Bulgaria and in Berlin.

The fly in Hitler's Balkan ointment is that British air and naval power is solidly based in Greece. From the island of Crete, and from other Greek bases even closer up, British air power is in easy bombing distance of the Rumanian oil target, and also of the now greatly extended Nazi army front in Bulgaria.

British Plans in Doubt

Just why it has not struck back in Bulgaria is not clear. It may have been due to some new British commitments to Turkey or the hope pose closure—a procedure under which no senator can speak more than once or more than one hour. A two-thirds majority is necessary to impose closure.

Score Absent Senators

Wheeler declared he had read suggestions for closure and added that they came "from senators who have spent very little time on the floor."

If they would stay here and listen to the debate," he added, "there wouldn't be so much shouting about closure."

Clark remarked that Senator Smathers (D-NJ), who spoke in support of the bill today, had been on the floor infrequently. He quoted Smathers as saying that anyone could express his views on the legislation in twenty minutes and then added:

"After hearing the senator, I am satisfied that he could have expressed all the views he has without addressing the Senate at all."

Some administration leaders said long night sessions probably would be ordered in an effort to wear down opposition speakers.

On the floor, Senator Walsh (D-Mass.) denounced the bill as one committing the United States "to aid which involves actual war—not only material resources and financial resources, but the blood of our young men."

England's Fight Not Ours

"If England is fighting our fight we belong in the war by her side," the Massachusetts senator declared. "Why hypocrisy of those who insist that England is fighting our fight and yet that we shall give only limited aid—limited to measures short of war!"

To my mind," Walsh declared at another point, "this bill approaches the recklessness, the daring, the insanity of one who tries to ride Niagara Falls in a rowboat."

Advocates of the bill, Walsh said, are "guided by their emotions rather than reason" and wish "to give America to save the world."

Walsh spoke before crowded galleries after senators Smathers (D-NJ) and Tunnell (D-Del) had voiced support of the bill. Senator Bridges (R-NH), another supporter of the measure, and Senator Reynolds (D-NC), an opponent, followed Walsh.

Tunnell advocated the measure as one which would tend to keep war from American shores by weakening Germany. He said that those opposing the legislation "prefer to have the war, if one does occur in which the United States is directly interested, in the United States."

Advice to Gangsters

Smathers asserted that the United States should "say to these three gangster pirates (Germany, Italy and Japan) that we will not be cowed by them and their threats, that we intend to live as free men in a free world and to give every aid within our power to those nations who have a like desire and the courage, faith and hope to resist totalitarian enslavement."

Briggs, who often has opposed administration policies, told the chamber that the United States is "the ultimate core of the resistance to the new world order," which he said was sought by the Axis powers.

Briggs urged that the administration, once the British Aid bill is passed, give aid to all countries "which are being attacked by outlaw dictator nations."

Senator Reynolds, making his second major address on the bill, said that he had no intention of participating in a filibuster but added that "there is a great distinction between a filibuster and legitimate discussion of any legislation."

Reynolds suggested three amendments to the bill—to forbid aid to Russia, to deport Harry Bridges, west coast labor leader, and to prohibit "Communists, Fascists or Nazis" from holding government jobs.

Vichy Government Accepts Japanese Indo-China Offer

Ministers Agree to Third Proposal Save for Minor Details

VICHY, FRANCE, March 3 (AP) — Japanese circles said Tokyo sent a third proposal for settlement of the Indo-Chinese-Thailand border dispute which French ministers tonight accepted save for a few minor details.

The proposal agreed substantially to modifications the ministers asked for when Tokyo made its "final offer" on Feb. 28, it was said. The new terms dropped previous requests for Thai bridgeheads on the French side of the Mekong river at Luangprabang and Pakse, and a Thai frontier extending to lake Tonle Sap.

Foreign circles were inclined to attach great importance to an interview between U. S. Ambassador Admiral William D. Leahy and Marshal Petain just before the cabinet met, but if the Japanese account is correct observers said they did not see how the interview could have affected the ministers' decision.

"We yielded to Japan, not Thailand," one official stated in describing the concessions as "large." Although it was not stated specifically just what territory was surrendered, the spokesmen denied that the whole of three Indo-China provinces and the greater part of two others had been yielded.

Unofficially, observers said they believed the concessions were strips of the upper and lower Laos province on the right bank of the Mekong river opposite Luang Prabang and Pakse, but that the left banks of these two areas remained at issue.

Acute Shortage of Farm Workers Reported in Md.

Central Clearing House Suggested to Solve Problem

COLLEGE PARK, Md., March 3 (AP)—Establishment of a central clearing house for available Maryland farm labor was proposed today in a preliminary report of a special committee studying an acute shortage of farm workers.

Dr. T. B. Symons, committee chairman and director of the University of Maryland Extension Service, said the committee "will undertake to determine what action is necessary to remedy the farm labor shortage in Maryland in 1941." The preliminary report shows the present shortage totals more than 4,000 farm workers in Maryland.

Symons said, adding: "It is anticipated that the situation will become more acute as the planting, cultivating, and harvesting season approach and the defense program is expanded."

Study Other Methods
Besides the proposed clearing house, the committee said a number of other methods for meeting the shortage and using available labor to the best advantage are being studied.

Symons appointed P. C. Turner of Parkton chairman of the sub-committee, with Dr. S. H. Devault of the university, secretary.

Other committeemen are John M. Pohlhaus, commissioner of labor and statistics; Harry D. Willard, Jr., director of the work projects administration, Baltimore; Ryland Dempster, National Youth Administration; Francis G. Shillinger, Talbot county; R.C.P. Weagley, Washington county; Russell Adkins, Wicomico county; and County Agents P. D. Brown, H. M. Carroll, and Stanley E. Day, of Charles, Harford, and Anne Arundel counties, respectively.

Other Chairmen Named
Symons said these chairmen had been named for other sub-committees of the state planning group to deal with emergency agricultural problems:

H. H. Nuttle, Caroline county, production and surplus disposition; W. H. Holloway, Worcester county, marketing; Walter E. Bural, Frederick county, forestry and soil conservation; T. Roy Brooks, Harford, rural housing; Mrs. Roy C. P. Weagley, Washington, nutrition, health and sanitation; and Joseph H. Blandford, Prince George's, education.

Oppose Use of State Policemen To Instruct Drivers

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 3 (AP)—Governor O'Connor's highway traffic safety committee and the state administration's spokesman in the Senate split tonight over legislation under which state policemen would teach safety driving courses in county high schools.

Shortly after A. Burton Metzger, enforcement committee chairman of the Governor's Safety committee, opposed the bill, Senator Dudley G. Roe (D-Queen Anne's), majority floor leader in the Senate, announced:

"I am heartily in favor of House bill 185 which passed the House of Delegates last week, providing for safety training for our High School pupils. To my mind, this is one of the most progressive and important measures before the General Assembly."

Metzger's statement on the bill, now before the Senate was:

"While our committee favors and has recommended a drivers' training course in all High Schools, we do not recommend the use of state police to do the teaching."

Ministers Oppose Licensed Bingo

SALISBURY, Md., March 3 (AP)—Fifteen Wicomico county ministers, opposing by resolution a proposed legislative measure to legalize bingo games in the county, declared today that they "do not believe any Christian church or patriotic organization should ever resort to gambling in order to raise funds."

Previously Wicomico county ministers have gone on record opposing a measure that would legalize Sunday baseball in the area and had favored legislation to prevent sale of intoxicating beverages on the Sabbath.

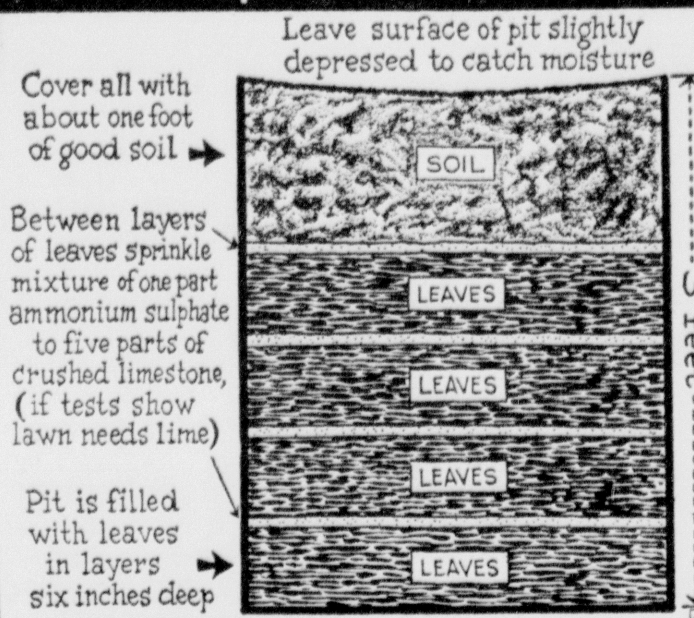

The resolution opposing bingo came for benefit of religious or charitable organizations was forwarded to the Wicomico delegation in the state legislature at Annapolis last night.

"We desire in the name of honesty and good citizenship to register our vigorous opposition to this proposed amendment to the law. We further declare our resentment at the inclusion of 'religious organizations' in this bill. We do not believe that any organization should ever resort to gambling in order to raise funds."

"We consider this a vicious bill, detrimental to the morals of our people, an insidious parasite... and a reflection upon the good names of the people of our country."

Fertility of Soil Is All-Important

Most garden experts agree that in vegetable growing the fertility of the soil is all important.

Says Prof. R. A. Schroeder of the

"One of the oldest and most persistent problems in the growing of good vegetables year after year is the maintenance of a high level of soil fertility after it has once been achieved."

"Frequently vegetable growers spend considerable time and effort finding and then using new and

Constant Dosing with Cathartics Seen As Chief Factor in "Spastic Colitis"

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

The intestine is a muscular tube and it is subject to many nervous impulses. These impulses affect the muscular coat, throwing it into spasm. The condition is known as "spastic colitis" or, commonly "colitis." It is not considered a disease and the exact underlying cause is not easily found, but in one form or another it is the commonest condition the physician meets in his consultation room. It mimics many other conditions and is called appendicitis, gallstones, cholecystitis, subacute appendicitis, ulcers of the stomach and even cancer. And because of the many operations performed on these patients, it has an importance out of all proportion to its actual danger.

The causes have been divided into local and general. The prolonged use of cathartics is undoubtedly a factor.

Habit Difficult To Break
It is very difficult to get these cathartic habit people to stop the habit. They are very reasonable about it, and agree with you that it is a bad thing but when evening comes and that feeling of heaviness is there, nothing seems to be able to keep them from going to the pill box. If you do, however, manage to get them off the habit, they are the happiest people in the world.

Another cause that has been suggested is allergy. It is supposed the spasm is due to hypersensitivity to a certain food and that eating this food causes the spasm. It is often a very common food that is at fault. This is all the more puzzling because if you have cramps every time you have broccoli, you are likely to connect the two events, but you are likely to eat some form of wheat or eggs every day so your discomfort is continuous and the connection is hard to form.

Various kinds of vitamins have been used in colitis, as they have in nearly every other ailment, and extracts of the ductless glands also, such as theelin or estrone, with somewhat more success.

The most important elements in treatment are the re-education of the patient and it is, like all education, a very painful process. The patients with colitis are perfectly willing to submit to doing everything that is bad for them. They are willing, indeed they insist on cathartics and enemata. Dr. O. S. Jones, of St. Louis, is very graphic on this point. He admits complete failure to re-educate his patients in normal habits. They "insist on a complete evacuation every day if it takes castor oil to do it. Mere castor oil and agar are not enough; some have been taking an enema every day for years. Others have been taking a laxative every other day or every day for forty years."

Diet is a logical form of treatment. If the colon can be irritated by irritating food, it seems logical to eliminate the food from the diet—beans, cabbage, onions, garlic, sauerkraut, lunch meat (very indigestible), chili, pepper, excessive amounts of fat, and sweets.

By all odds the greatest service the physician can do the patient with colitis is to prevent a surgical operation. Dr. Alvarez of the Mayo clinic has the final statistics on this point: all these people think they ought to have the appendix out. Dr. Alvarez found that of 255 such patients, only one per cent was relieved of symptoms.

Questions and Answers
Q. B.:—"How many hours' sleep does a person thirty years old need? Is five or six hours enough? People I know say 'yes' but I find I need eight or nine hours."

Answer—Five or six hours' sleep in twenty-four is sufficient for anybody over the age of thirty. Most sleeping troubles are not due to lack of sleep but what you think about the amount of sleep you have had. If you think five or six hours rests you, then it is enough. If you get to worrying about whether it has rested you or not, it is insufficient. However, you better not monkey with sleep. If you can get eight or nine hours of sleep do so, and let the rest of the world go by.

Here's A Tip On Leaf Fertilizer

One of the best fertilizers for grass is a mixture prepared from leaf mold, says Horace F. Major of the University of Missouri College of Agriculture. "Collect the leaves in the fall and place them in a pit where they can rot," Major advises.

"A mixture of one part ammonium sulphate to five parts of crushed limestone (if tests show your lawn needs lime) should then be sprinkled over each six-inch layer of leaves in the pit.

"The lawn should be raked thoroughly in the spring, before the decayed leaves are applied, and as deeply as possible without pulling up the grass roots."

Major says the mixture has these advantages: It is free of weed seeds, has no odor, is rich in humus and nitrogen, is easily applied, is cheap and gets excellent results.

Improved mechanical implements.

Without taking away any of their just value, it might also be stated that many times improvement of soil fertility would prove of considerably more value.

"This is true not only from the standpoint of producing larger yields and higher quality, but from the amount of work as well.

Fertilize Before Plowing
"One of the time-honored methods of maintaining soil fertility is to apply barnyard manure. This still ranks as probably the most satisfactory method, but the first modification generally should be to increase the amount which is applied.

"Fresh manure applied four to six inches deep before fall plowing is an excellent recommendation for the average gardener. For some gardens, however, the amounts should be increased, and for others, perhaps, decreased.

"A second modification should be to supplement this manure application with a complete fertilizer. The amount to apply varies so widely that it is well for the gardener to consult his county agent or college of agriculture.

"Another method of maintaining an adequate level of soil fertility is to grow and turn under leguminous green manure crops and to supplement this practice with an application of a complete fertilizer.

Alternate Gardening
"An increasing number of gardeners in Missouri are finding that their gardens are considerably more successful from having grown and turned under a leguminous green manure crop upon half of their garden area one year and then using that area for the vegetable garden the next year.

"The second year, green manure crops are produced in the part of the garden which was in vegetables the previous year. Thus the garden area is divided, and one year is spent preparing the soil for the vegetable crops. Many growers find it possible to turn under as many as three green manure crops in one year."

State Advertising That Brings Good Results

CUMBERLAND and Western Maryland get some interesting exploitation in three of half a dozen interesting folders just issued by the Maryland Publicity Commission.

The folders, attractively printed in orange and black, include sectional maps indicating with colored numbers the places of interest to which the attention of tourists is invited.

One folder is devoted to the camping and fishing opportunities in the mountains of the state with four spots noted in Garrett county, two in Washington county and one in Frederick. Cumberland comes in for mention of Fort Cumberland in a folder devoted to historic scenes and famous homes. It also gets notice in a folder about horse racing.

The other folders have to do with Chesapeake Bay and the ocean beaches, salt water fishing and garden tours of Eastern Maryland.

These folders are nicely prepared, descriptions of the points of interest being listed in brief, which will serve the convenience of the travelers wishing to visit them.

Such publicity as this should be quite helpful in stimulating tourist travel in Maryland. In fact, there ought to be more of it. The state of Pennsylvania has been advertising its places of interest quite extensively and, according to the current issue of Editor and Publisher, the results have been gratifying. In 1939 its tourist advertising appropriations totaled $52,725, and the total for the current fiscal year has been set at $161,200. Of the latter appropriation, $80,800 is for national magazines, $61,700 for newspapers and $18,700 for other forms of publicity.

Has the expenditure there been worth while? J. Herbert Walker, director of the state's tourist and recreational information, says it has. "The United States Travel Bureau of the department of the Interior," he says, "credits Pennsylvania in 1939 with having had tourist retail expenditures amounting to $339,860,000, thus placing the state fifth in the list of states in tourist travel and expenditures. We anticipate that the figure for 1940 (1-41) will be between $350,000,000 and $400,000,000. In 1940, as a result of the advertising, approximately 50,000 direct inquiries for information about Pennsylvania were received by the department. This was double the number of inquiries received the previous year."

One means of ascertaining the extent of tourist travel there was by checking cars, although this was only partial as only eleven of the seventy-four main interstate roads were checked and these only twelve hours of the day. State motor police thus checked 394,688 bona fide tourist cars carrying 1,023,322 persons. Also the income from gasoline taxes was indicative, an increase of approximately $3,500,000 being shown from June 1, 1939, to May 31, 1940, over the same period of the preceding year.

Hence, such advertising may be regarded as a good investment which more than pays for itself. Maryland would do well to follow carefully the results in Pennsylvania, as no doubt its publicity commission is doing, and profit therefrom.

The Maryland commission, by the way, informs the News that the folders mentioned will be supplied gratis to interested persons if they apply to it at the State Office Building, Annapolis.

Significant Stand By Senator Norris

UNEXPECTED SUPPORT of the Ellender amendment to the Lease-Lend bill by Senator Norris, of Nebraska, who is an administration supporter and who has been favoring enactment of the measure, can be regarded as meaning but one thing. That is recognition of the widespread anti-war feeling throughout the nation.

The senator holds the belief that the present language of the bill could not be interpreted as authorizing the sending of troops to help Britain or any other country, yet he feels now that the Ellender amendment should be added. That amendment would place Congress on record against the employment of American troops outside the Western Hemisphere.

The change of attitude on the part of Senator Norris in this respect is significant. The senator is an opportunist and keeps his hand on the pulse of the country. Evidently he has detected the strong opposition among the people against the sending of troops abroad, or, in other words, direct participation in the war.

The people want to give all possible aid to Britain, but they are undeniably against any participation in this war as was the case in the last one.

Airport Assurance Is Gratifying

CUMBERLAND is at last assured of a modern airport, presidential approval of a WPA project for its construction having been given, and this is a matter for congratulation all around, especially in view of the long and patient campaign that was waged for it.

That this is an essential need few can deny in view of the vast development of aerial transportation, and like many other facilities occasioned by the march of science it is something that would have had to be provided sooner or later. It is just one of those things that are necessary in order to prevent the community from an isolation not to be suffered in the march of progress.

Some final details are yet to be worked out, including the tying up of loose legislative strings in the legislatures of the two states concerned, and a few fiscal matters on the part of the city government. These, however, are well on the way to completion with all indications that they will be taken care of in due course. It is gratifying, of course, so far as municipal capacity is concerned, that the federal government will pay for the major part of the cost. The city may have to pay out a few thousand dollars more than was originally calculated, but the sum is apparently well within its means. Essential utility services will have to be provided for an airport of the size contemplated.

That the airport will be one of first class and not a secondary or supplementary field is also a matter for congratulation. This is one of those projects that, if worth doing at all, is worth doing well. The need of an adequate airport here is stressed by geography as much as anything else, as it will fill an important gap in the transcontinental air lanes. The community will benefit in more ways than one from this project.

The Corvette and the Pocket Submarine

WHILE some may experience uneasiness over the threats by the Nazis of what they expect to do with some 600 pocket-sized submarines in destroying British shipping, it is not to be taken for granted that Great Britain has not been aware of this potentiality and that it has been disregarding the need for counter action.

News pictures have already been released of the hitherto secret corvette, a warship much smaller than the destroyer, which has been and is being produced in quantity in Canadian shipyards and which is reported to carry all of the anti-submarine weapons of the average destroyer.

These corvettes are much smaller, much easier to build in quantity and much less expensive. If they prove seaworthy, which no doubt trials have proved, and can be operated in the stormy sea lanes of the North Atlantic, they should prove an important safeguard against Germany's vaunted school of pup submarines.

In all likelihood the British have profited from the results accomplished by this country with its "splinter" fleets during the World war. These were composed of small, cheap and easily built wooden ships carrying small guns and depth charge devices, and were quite effective against submarines and as auxiliaries for the over-worked destroyer fleet.

Anyway, Britain does not appear to be sleeping on the job of self defense. It is in a position where it simply cannot.

A Musical Event Worth the While

THE NEWS COLUMNS have noted that overtures have been made by those in charge of the itinerary of the United States Navy Band to give one of its concerts in Cumberland. The bid for a possible date was made in the nature of a community offer to Mayor Harry Irvine, who has passed it along to local organizations for their consideration with a suggestion to the band management that the local American Legion post would be a logical group to arrange for the event.

Cumberlanders who have heard this musical organization say that it is something well worth hearing, and the hope has been expressed by them that the band be brought here if at all feasible. Its appearance here would not only be a stimulus to musical culture in general but also to the members of local bands, who are striving to bring up their own collective efforts to points of excellence and who have been doing well in that respect.

In view of the vast number of French politicians constantly on the move between those points, the Paris-Vichy railroad sounds like a profitable investment.

Japanese are suffering from a scarcity of towels, says a news item. They'd better save one just in case the Chinese start reversing that war on them.

A movie comedian says a man with a lot of money isn't funny. Well, all he need do to get a big laugh is lose it.

Ever Go Snipe Hunting?

By MARSHALL MASLIN

Did anybody ever take you Snipe Hunting? I don't mean with a gun. I mean with a light and open sack in the middle of a black night, in country that was strange to you.

I went once, just once. . . I was a kid in a new town and I had to be "initiated." All I had to do, they told me, was sit in a dark wood and hold open the mouth of a sack while the snipe, attracted by the lamp, hopped and fluttered and at last cooly drew near and walked right into the sack. Then my job was to close the sack and walk home. . . And I nearly did it. But something happened. Perhaps my father told me it was just a game—that there were no snipes in that wood—that snipe weren't caught that way—that it was an old trick to humiliate a fellow and get the laugh on him and make him feel cheap. Or perhaps some other boy in the neighborhood, who didn't favor practical jokes, tipped me off. At any rate, I did NOT go snipe hunting. Never went myself, never took anybody else snipe hunting. And have never liked practical jokes from that day to this.

My dislike of them is no virtue. I hate them because I am so gullible. I never suspect them until I'm right in the trap, red-faced and embarrassed and hating the practical joker and wondering what fun he gets out of it. I don't like to be left holding the bag so I don't like to see other people holding the bag either.

There's grief enough in this world, there's trouble enough for everybody, without deliberately manufacturing humiliation for others. If we want superiority, we should earn it honestly; we can't get it by any of the practical jokes that men use to inflate their vanity and swell their arrogance.

There are Wise Guys in this world and there are Suckers. The Wise Guys hold life cheap and cheat their friends and their families as they cheat themselves of the best there is in life. The Suckers sometimes lose everything they have—and they moan and they suffer agonies of humiliation—but the Simplest Simon that ever lived never lost as much as that man who thinks this world is made just for him, and that other human beings were created just to be taken on Snipe Hunts for his amusement.

Tradition Binds South on War, Gen. Johnson Says

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

GEORGETOWN, S. C., March 3.—It is a matter of common remark that in this crisis the South is the most war-minded section of the country. It is a curious condition considering that the South stands to lose heavily in export markets for two principle staples—cotton and tobacco. Of course, it is gaining just now in the spread of war industries, if that temporary shot in the arm can be called gain. But it is gaining less relatively than several other sections which are not so belligerent.

Hugh S. Johnson

In a short hunting trip in South Carolina, there was an opportunity to discuss this phenomenon with citizens of one of the principal war states of our past history. In the Middle-West a common remark is: "Oh that region has always been hell-bent for battle. It got us into most of our wars." Even here in South Carolina there is some talk of the "hot-blooded Southern spirits."

Not Always

But it isn't true that the South took the lead toward every war. It wanted the War of 1812 when England didn't. It was the tom-tom beater for the Mexican war. It perpetuated the "War between the States" as they insist on calling it in these parts. But there are understandable reasons for all of these. The Mexican war was expected to add a vast territory to the slave-holding South and it was only part of a very old scheme that haunted all our early history—to create a great cotton American empire south far into Mexico.

All the southern communities were vitally interested in seaborne commerce, and those new ones in the west, like Kentucky and Tennessee, simply had to keep open their access to the Gulf of Mexico through the mouth of the Mississippi. Those incentives are enough to explain southern interest in our only war against Mexico and our second war with England.

Other Wars

The Civil war speaks for itself. It started with a declaration of independence as sincerely uttered against the North as was the one of 1776 against King George. Almost nobody now reproaches the South for what it considered its war for liberty.

But the South was not responsible for our war with Spain and, as to our entrance into World War I, the southern position was almost a complete reversal of its belligerence today. Both the South and the Middle-West entered that war reluctantly, notwithstanding that the economic conditions were very different and then both of these present-day predominantly agricultural areas were promised an almost boundless, if temporary, prosperity by engagement in war.

A very wise Southern Carolinian, whose family relationships link him closely with the whole history of American war as they have concerned the South, contributed what seems to be the true answer:

"In the South you cannot oppose the policies of a Democratic president and administration, and continue in the high regard of your neighbors. It isn't any slavish knuckling to any individual. It is a community remembrance of ancient wrongs and a community of mutual interest in present rights."

Woodrow Wilson and his Democratic party had conditioned Southern Democratic opinion to neutrality and suddenly switched. It eventually followed his war efforts as ardently as any section and more ardently than most, but it took more time. Franklin Roosevelt, throughout the development of this crisis, has conditioned that opinion to belligerence. Most of the South feels that it has gained greatly under the president. It is willing to overlook any harm it has taken because of benefits received. It is more loyal to him than ever, and since it has always been a community of hero-worshippers, perhaps it is not surprising.

Its publication is essential because an informed public opinion is the one force which, more surely and more fairly than restrictive laws, can induce labor and management to realize their responsibilities to the country and to settle their controversies peaceably by voluntary co-operation.

Litvinov, Fallen from Grace, Seeks Refuge in This Country, Reports Say

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

Unless he's purged from the land of the living, as well as out of his government job in Moscow, it's understood in Washington that Maxim Litvinov, until very lately one of the big men at Communist headquarters, plans to seek refuge in this country from the unpleasant possibilities inseparable from continued residence in Russia by persons who have incurred Comrade Stalin's displeasure.

Presumably Maxim already has hinted, to some official authority here, at his desire to come to the United States, with a view to ascertaining whether or not he'll be admitted. And most likely a leak in the news of his supposed overtures is responsible for reports that that's what his wish is.

He was in Washington for a few months, three or four years ago, as an important commissar in the Moscow setup. That, however, was only a comparatively short stay. The visit also was more or less diplomatic in its nature, connected with Russo-American trade relations. Letting him settle here permanently might be a different matter.

Still, the fact that he's fallen out with Joe Stalin is regarded as quite a favorable recommendation. If the row between them was mean enough and Maxim has turned anti-Communist, he doubtless could spill plenty of valuable information to such an outfit as the Dies committee concerning Soviet agents' activities in the U. S. A. and elsewhere throughout the Americas. Samuel Krivitsky, formerly of the OGPU, who recently committed suicide (or maybe was murdered by OGPU gunmen) in his Washington hotel, did. And Maxim ought to know a deal more than Krivitsky did; he was a lot higher up in the Moscow organization.

Going Democratic
Washington has no clear idea yet what Max was kicked out for. One version is that he was developing streaks of democracy. If that's true, it's easy to see how he got Joe Stalin's dander up.

Another account is that Joe assigned tasks to him, relative to foreign affairs, that he simply couldn't execute, and that Joe canned him on grounds of incompetency. Even that, though, would be calculated to make him sore at his boss and perhaps inspire him to tell things to the Dies committee.

Of course, even if we agree to let him in, it's no cinch that Joe Stalin will let anything but his remains leave Russia.

It must be a good deal of a bother to Joe to have to send OGPU executioners clear from Moscow to bump off Russians he wants to have liquidated as they're believed to have attended to Leon Trotsky in Mexico City and as they're suspected of having done to Sam Krivitsky in Washington, though the local police said that Krivitsky's case was a suicide.

It likewise causes resentment in places like Mexico City and Washington to have Moscow's death sentences executed in their midst; it has a tendency to create international friction, which it would be natural for Joe to prefer to avoid if possible.

So if Max does get an admission ticket to the United States it's no certainty that Joe'll let him out of Russia to come across and present it. And, naturally, it will be none of our business if anything happens to him in Russia.

Not a Good Risk

Neither will he rate as a very good life insurance risk even if he gets here.

When he was in Washington the last time, the National Press Club invited him to make a speech to its members. He made it, too. That is, he read it. He wasn't particularly thrilling, however, for Max doesn't speak a bit of United States. It was in Russian, and had to be interpreted. It takes the ginger out of a speech to have it filtered out to its auditors through an interpreter. Max appears to be a forceful chap. He read that speech with plenty of energy, but the interpreter couldn't translate energy.

Litvinov is a very short stocky chap. He evidently is deeply in earnest in what he's saying. What's the use, though, if you can't understand a word of it?

That'll hamper him as a Dies witness.

Brawling Not Diplomatic

From the Morgantown, W. Va. Post

George Earle, our minister to Bulgaria, is supposed to be a diplomat, not a barroom bouncer.

A lot of us will probably be remarking with undisguised pleasure that a he-man Earle is, and will be expressing our sorrow that it wasn't Hitler himself he kayoed in a Sofia cafe.

But after all we have our diplomats to do our diplomatic work and our army, navy, and marines to do our fighting, and we rather expect them to remain within their respective fields of duty.

Earle has been involved in two or three other brawls in the Balkans, and has fairly well demonstrated that, however proficient he may be at the many art of self defense, he falls short of the highest standards of diplomacy.

Of course, we really didn't have much reason to expect that he would do better in the diplomatic service than he has done. He was sent to Bulgaria, not because of any special qualification to represent the interests of this country in that troubled section of Europe, but solely because he had been defeated for election to the United States Senate.

We have altogether too many men in the foreign service who owe their positions to circumstances similar to those responsible for the appointment of our Minister to Bulgaria.

As one Pennsylvania newspaper remarks, the lack of tact which Earle displayed in giving a Bulgarian orchestra leader $10 to play "Tipperary" at a time when several Germans were in the cafe would prompt him, if he should happen to be a visitor in Atlanta, to have the band play "Marching through Georgia."

Installment Plan Flying

George Aid Holds British Navy Is Vital Safeguard

By EDWIN C. HILL

The Gentleman from India has recently written a letter to a fellow Hoosier suggested that the United States is becoming a little less concerned than it should be about the ability of the British to hold out. Last spring, Mr. Booth Tarkington recalled, quite suddenly all over the United States there swept a universal and usually unanimous demand for amendment on a scale that had never before been contemplated, even in actual warfare.

"The United States," wrote Tarkington, "was frightened through because everybody knew that the country was in danger. In danger of what? In danger of losing the British navy, and then no suddenly woke up from the stupor that it was an unarmed country relying on the British navy for protection, even possibly its existence."

Less Scared Now

"Now in the months since then the British navy, which, with the Royal Air Force, defends the British empire, has demonstrated that it is still alive and pretty capable. Gradually, on that account, we're less scared; we have become more confident, and a great many people lulled by a lull in the storm, so to speak, have largely recovered from the jitters."

"Instead of screaming, 'give me a gun,' they're now saying, 'I think I'd better spend a lot of money having a gun made; but really, I don't depend on anybody. I'm strong; I'm independent. My life and business don't hang on the courage, power and equipment of anybody else. I don't see why I want to risk anything by helping Britain much.'"

Can Come Again

"That's all, Senator. I'm merely suggesting that we haven't yet got a very good gun ourselves. I'm scared can come again, and with will come the truth that was evident last spring—that our protection (as perhaps our existence as a free people) does depend on the British navy."

It has been truly said that Mr. Tarkington, with his outstanding qualities of personality—aside from his writing genius—as a free people's humorist, his love of beauty and his kindly outlook on life. He likes to think back on the tranquility of the horse and buggy days before the mechanistic age came in and the craze for efficiency had developed; the days when it took courage of a high order to wear one-piece bathing suits.

Decries Modern Mode

Mr. Tarkington is not enamored of present-day modes and manners. He doesn't think he is much in passing up modern fashions.

"I have never believed that film made for strength," the gentleman from Indiana said once. "Realism is talking about ugly things, in a ugly way. I venture to say that the boy who read Henty and Alger and a little later Dickens and Scott who went to see 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' and climbed under the tent to get a view of the elephant who rode a high-wheeled bicycle, a safety, who took his bath on Saturday night in a wooden tub or a copper one, and who swam a near-by river or creek was happier than the sophisticated youth of today."

Happier Day for Boys

"The something is true of the fathers who went to business either on foot or in their carriages, who warmed themselves before an open fire or a parly stove, who wore their business attires in Spencerian script and made copies with a ball pen, and who laughed at the crack-brains whose cop of horseless carriages."

"As for the women, they have gained their independence. Girls may become scientists or enter chorus without evoking shrieks of disapproval from their families. They no longer have to tug at their dresses along with them. Are the happier than their mothers and grandmothers?"—Copyright, 1941 King Feature Syndicate, Inc.

much down and so much on time. Then the railroad took a divvy last May when they began to see travel on future payment.

Up to a recent date 1,000 railroad tickets had been sold in cred for a total of more than $600,000, two-thirds of which apparently would not have been purchased for cash. The individual fare ran from the allowable minimum of 30 up to a maximum of $870, the average was $114, and the interest carrying charge on each $100 of tickets amounted to $8. Two months are given to pay.

Despite the advancing march of installment buying, cash and cash still looks far better to the economist. The lad who labored save $10 to take a brief flight up on landing reported he didn't think it very much because he didn't know how it cost him $1 a month, had a bit of horse sense. He saw the cost. Everything has to be paid for, and the thing that is easiest to get into sometimes costs the most in the end. But what's the installment plan? It's made! The sole commodity beyond its reach seems to be the post stamp.

SURPRISE MOVE

Belinda Gets a Brilliant Idea, and for a Day and a Night Allistown Is in an Uproar

By JAMES O'HARA

The day when Belinda Hawkins of Allistown's most energetic and social-conscious spinsters, laid down her epic of constructive thinking before the Allistown Women's Club was one often to be remembered by all the good ladies who comprised that club.

"Ladies," President Belinda opened with great directness and with the light of the true zealot sparkling in her slightly near-sighted eyes, "the time has come for us girls to come to the immediate aid of our town. It is up to us, since the men seem to have failed so miserably at it, to raise a deficiency fund to meet the new town budget!"

"The statement was routine as far as it went. For years it had been one of the recurrent themes of the club.

were already planning their dinners, or wondering if the refreshment committee had anything new to offer in the way of edibles after the meeting proper.

"Something has to be done about the budget, ladies," Belinda said distinctly. Her eyes narrowed and she waited just a split second for dramatic effect. "I think I have the solution!"

Wandering eyes centred once again on the speaker. The club had been stumbling around in a mental doldrum over the long winter months. They were willing to listen to anything that promised a change. Belinda sensed that.

"We have at our disposal a weapon to combat the situation," Belinda pushed home her point. "Figures show that there are over 1,200 eligible bachelors in Allistown. I propose that someone move that this club institute a program that will result in legislation that will place a tax on every bachelor in town whose salary will stand it!"

That snapped the good women out of their inattention! Belinda Hawkins wasn't fooling! But who ever heard of such an outlandish idea?

"Madame President, I sincerely hope that your words are not serious," Elva Peabody rose to announce, not even waiting to be recognized by the chair. Elva was the mayor's wife, and in the back of her mind was the dread thought of attempting to manage her husband if the crazy subject was even suggested to the city council.

"There is no progress without change, Mrs. Peabody!" the speaker challenged a bit pettily. "I recommend that a motion be made for a bachelors' tax of $200 a year to be suggested to the council at its next meeting!" It readily became apparent what Belinda's motives were.

Jed Crawford was the president of the chamber of commerce, and besides being a stingy bachelor, has been a regular visitor to Belinda's home for so many years that no one ever thought of him any longer as being a suitor. He liked Belinda's cooking—and evidently could stand her chatter, but he never seemed to be in the question-popping mood.

"I make the motion, Madame President, that this club institute proceedings to have legislation passed providing for a tax on Allistown bachelors!" Madame Pemberton arose to offer. Mamie was also one of those maidens charitably described as "getting on."

A swift chorus of sounds brought an answering smile to the chairman's face.

"I have carefully thought this matter out in advance," she apprised the meeting, and delved into her briefcase for a sheaf of papers, "and now I will report the results of my findings."

As a mistress of tactics Belinda was a wonder.

"I'm going to depend on you very largely to influence your husband to co-operate, as mayor, Mrs. Peabody!" she told that worried lady after the meeting and in confidence.

"I know that he will welcome it as a means of lifting a financial weight from his official shoulders. And it won't affect his purse!"

Which was true enough. Belinda knew her small-town psychology. Plenty of the boys would gladly pay the tax to keep eligible as bachelors—and nothing more. The married men could proudly hide behind the new law and not suffer from the additional taxation in some other direction which would otherwise have to be drafted. And the bachelor girls in town would support it wholeheartedly and gladly assist backward swains to get around the tax by making of them tractable husbands!

A week passed, and Belinda hopefully awaited results from Member Elva Peabody, who had been detailed to work on her husband, the mayor.

That harried lady came to Belinda's home late one evening and rang the front door bell.

"It won't work, Belinda Hawkins. I guess you'll just have to operate a lockout strike against Jed Crawford all on your own if you want him badly enough to cause a ruckus!" she delivered an ultimatum warily.

Belinda's eyes narrowed. "Elva Peabody! What do you mean?"

"My husband threatens me with a divorce if I keep on pestering him, that's what!" the mayor's helpmeet advised. "And besides that, the council met secretly last night and unanimously passed a law providing thirty days in the town jail for any woman who fosters or presents 'antislavery' ideas to the council!"—(Distributed by United Feature Syndicate.)

Solving Parent Problems
Q. What of the effect on the child's morale for his parents to take him into a movie on a ticket for a child when they know he has passed the age limit for children's tickets?

A. Very destructive. A parent so dramatizing a lie in the presence of a child, about this child's age, while entering a theater or public conveyance, can do more harm than years of religious education can correct. And some pious parents will lie in this manner while going with the child to Sunday school or church!

Q. He certainly is. See that the younger child minds his own business and does not snoop around and tag along when his older brother or sister has his friends with him. It is most serious when the older child is beginning to grow interested in the opposite sex. Help the younger child to cultivate playmates of his own age and not expect to be of the gang of the older brother or sister.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

"If She Be Not Fair for Me—" Dear Miss Fairfax:

I met a certain girl two months ago and had the pleasure of dating her just once. I try to get her to go out with me again, but she refuses every time. She told my boy chum that she likes me very much, but every time I ask her to go out with me she says no. She is 19 and I am 20.

Finally I got her to talk to me one day, and when I asked her for a date, she told me she was interested in another young man, with whom she has never been out. I see her almost every evening on my way to work, and she says "Hello" with a million-dollar smile, but it makes me feel so downhearted that I avoid her. It interferes with my work, because I am deeply in love with her. Please give me some advice.

FREDDIE.

There's a lot of truth in the homely adage "If she be not fair for me, what care I how fair she be." The only way to get over an affair of this kind, which makes you miserable, is to force yourself to go about with other girls and persist until you forget the charmer who gives you no encouragement. It's the same principle as the "counter-irritant," an old standby in medicine.

Awakening of Conscience Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have a problem confronting me that is very troublesome. I went with a young man four years ago and have not spoken to him since. My love for him has died but, by conscience bothers me, and I would like to make up with him. How can I do this without making a fool of myself in his eyes?

DESPERATE

Are you quite sure your love for him is dead? When a girl hasn't spoken to a man for four years and she begins to worry about the way she has treated him, it seems to me more like an awakening of heart than conscience.

Recipe for Happy Marriages

Dear Miss Fairfax:

There are so many unhappy marriages that I think I am a very lucky person and must tell someone about it.

My husband and I have been married for four years. We never have an argument, for we do things together. If he wants to go fishing it's all right with me; if it's bowling I go; if he just wants to sit at home and read, I like that too. Neither one of us has forgotten the little things that made courtship so sweet.

He seats me at the table before sitting down himself; opens the car door and helps me in, and always tells me how nice I look, and how much he loves me.

I was a widow with a six-year old daughter when I married him and soon after our marriage he adopted her as his own, and they love each other very much.

I really think that jealousy is the evil of most marriages; if you are overly jealous of your mate, that means that you do not trust him. If that is the case there's no use trying to live together.

MRS. R. N.

Please read, mark and inwardly digest this lady's recipe, for an absolutely happy marriage. This husband and wife share their congenial tastes. But this remedy for marital unhappiness is so simple that it does not command a large school of thought.

CHAPTER TWENTY-TWO

THE SCHOOLHOUSE stood in a cleared space that was surrounded by a variety of trees, fir, dogwood and oak. It was made of logs and there was a broad chimney built of rocks and stones which had evidently been gathered close by.

"All it needs," said Joel, admiringly, "is an Abraham Lincolnish sort of person standing in the doorway, or a Mary and her lamb coming up the walk. Then the picture of the long, long ago would be complete."

"Like it?" Eve asked eagerly.

"I should say so! I almost wish I were a boy again so that I might become one of your pupils."

"Oh, you can be that anyway!" "Can I?"

"Yes. Don't forget this is a school for adults. You may come any time you like."

Joel brought the car to a stop close to the building and they sat looking it over for a time.

"I planned it myself," said Eve with pride. "I thought a log schoolhouse would be more appropriate. Besides, it would be hard to get the lumber for the floors and things up here, and the mountaineers simply wouldn't come down to The Gap." She turned to Joel. "It's even got a platform in it, so that we can have plays if we want to. . . . I haven't got around to that as yet."

"Maybe you'd better not," said Joel. "Some of the mountaineers might get ideas. To go on the stage, you know. And Broadway is already overcrowded with would-be actors and actresses."

"I shan't encourage them to that extent," Eve said. "But I do encourage them to sing their native songs and do their native dances. I feel that's doing a good work."

"Of course it is," said Joel. Eve grinned. "In that case, the worst that can happen to them is to get on Major Bowes' amateur hour. How about giving me a look inside? It would seem that the man to do the repairing hasn't yet arrived."

"I hope he isn't sick," Eve said. They got out of the car and Eve opened the schoolhouse door.

Inside they found the repair man. He was sitting at one of the desks, his head upon his folded arms, fast asleep.

"Jed!" Eve called.

The man called Jed looked up.

He was young, and he was only half awake.

"I reckon I musta fell ter sleep, Miss Eve," he said.

"I reckon you must have," said Eve.

"Maw had twins last night," Jed explained, "and I shore didn't get much sleep."

"Twins?" said Eve. "How wonderful! How is she getting on?"

"She's all right, I reckon," said Jed. "Havin' babies ain't so terrible fer Maw. . . . She's allus havin' 'em." He rubbed his eyes. "I reckon you want to git that thar roof mended."

"I certainly do," said Eve. "I don't want the desks ruined when we have a heavy rain."

Jed picked up a home-made tool box and moved to the door.

"I'll help you," said Joel. "I've become expert at mending roofs and things like that—since my cabin was in pretty bad shape."

"Thank you, Joel," Eve said. "Jed, this is Mr. Randall. . . . Joel, this is Jed Proudly."

"Howdy," said Joel.

"Howdy, yourself," said Joel—and shook the boy's hand.

In no time at all he was scrambling over the schoolhouse roof with the mountain boy and trying to catch the bang of the song Jed was singing. Eve busied herself inside, sweeping and cleaning. Then when she saw it was already past noon, she went out to the car and got the lunch basket. She spread a cloth out under a group of dogwood trees, and then called to Joel.

"Lunch is ready!" she said. "Come on, let's eat. You, too, Jed; there's enough for three. Mother probably counted you in when she made the sandwiches and boiled the eggs."

They took an hour off from working on the roof, and the three of them sat in the cool of the dogwoods' shade, Joel, leaning against a tree trunk, felt a delightful sense of well-being. It was fun being there with Eve and Jed.

Back to work at one o'clock, they finished all that was to be done by a little after four.

Joel and Jed made their final trip from the schoolhouse roof to the ground.

"Any other jobs, lady?" Joel asked.

"No, Joel," said Eve. "And thanks a much for helping." She glanced at her watch. "We'd better be starting for your place and my storage but as yet no investigation has been made in regard to the big Cumberland plant.

Storage

While the United States has more grain elevators than any country in the world, all are crammed to capacity at the present time, it was reported from Washington. In Canada, tons and tons of grain are on the ground, uncured.

No Domestic Demand
Chief reason for the unprecedented quantity of grain on hand is the fact that export trade has been pared down due to the war and also the fact that there is no domestic market for it.

Last year's bumper grain crop is expected to be followed by another big crop this year according to the prospects, McHenry said. This means that the government must find new space to store this year's crop, and that the storage belt will "spread out" beyond the normal channels in the midwest.

It is almost impossible to imagine the tremendous amount of grain now on hand in the United States, McHenry said yesterday, estimating that there was enough "to feed the world" if it could be exported.

fers it. But let our unemployed beware of the educator for defense industry who is mainly in it for what he can get out of it."

"In cases of doubt inquiry at the state, city or county departments of education, or the office of the Maryland Council of Defense and Resources should prove sufficient. Cases of complaints should likewise be laid before one of these agencies."

With heavy motor traffic to and from army cantonments and defense industries, many of them in new locations, and with an expected increase in vacation motor travel in 1941, it is vital for efficient movement and reduction of accidents that all traffic signals, signs and markings be modernized and in good working order. F. H. Rockwell of the Western Maryland Automobile club declared yesterday.

"At the most recent annual meeting of the American Automobile Association, in Washington, D. C., attended by motor club counselors from all parts of the country, it was emphasized that because of present open-highway speeds many traffic signs, particularly route markings and destination signs, are inadequate, especially at night," Rockwell said.

Reports were also received that in many parts of the United States such route and destination markings were installed by persons familiar with the roads and intersections, but without enough consideration of the fact that the markings were intended for strangers, many of them confused by heavy traffic, heavy turning movements, and other distractions.

City and state officials charged with sign posting on streets and highways in this area are urged to check such markings to insure that they are adequate in size and location to guide strangers along the intended routes.

"It is also urged that consideration be given to the use, where not used now, of much larger size letters and symbols on uniform traffic signs so that motorists, traveling at the higher speeds prevalent today, are able to read these important warnings."

Sand Patch Man Must Serve 105 Days in Jail Here

A word to the wise was not sufficient in the case of Lloyd A. Hutzell, of Sand Patch, Pa., who refused the advice of Officer Robert V. Chisholm and now he is in the "hoosegow" for 105 days in default of fines totaling $105 and costs which were imposed by Magistrate Frank A. Perdue on charges of drunken and reckless driving.

Officer Chisholm testified that he found Hutzell at the wheel of his car in South Cumberland and warned the man not to drive in his intoxicated condition. After the officer walked away the car was driven upon the sidewalk by Hutzell, where it stalled.

Officer Chisholm called headquarters and Officers W. P. Crabtree and Carl J. Stouffer arrived in a squad car and took Hutzell to jail.

The car driver said he did not hear any siren and did not see the fire truck until it crashed against his car. He was able to leave the hospital after treatment.

Fire Truck Damaged

The front of the fire truck was damaged and it was necessary to send Central Fire Company's truck on the call.

The blaze at the inn was caused when paper in a waste basket ignited. Damage was slight. Harold Northrup, who occupied the bedroom at the inn, went to work at the Kelly-Springfield tire plant at 7:45 a. m. and it is believed a cigarette in the waste basket caused the fire.

Harry Spies was driving the fire truck. An investigation is being made fire department officials said.

tion, the 1941 taxes will be even higher.

It is known that the payroll is about $10,000,000. Taxes of $5,424,954 are almost half of a payroll of $11,000,000.

Equals Half Year's Work

Thus the tax bill for 1940 would pay for about six months' work for every employee in the plant.

Taxes last year were shown to be more than the combined taxes for the three preceding years and were only $509,242 less than the accumulated levy from 1936 to 1939 inclusive.

In the last five years Celanese has paid taxes of $11,359,150, equal to nearly $950 for each of approximately 12,000 persons now employed by the corporation and its subsidiaries, the report revealed.

The rising tax trend is reflected in the fact that 1940 taxes were five times greater than in 1936, the report continued, stating that federal taxes alone in 1940 were $4,091,237 including $1,670,000 for excess profits tax.

Dr. Camille Dreyfus, president, reported continuance of the maintenance, modernization and research programs, in the report to the stockholders.

Operation Is Improved

"For maintenance," Dr. Dreyfus said, "the sum of $1,598,094 was spent in 1940 and $750,007 was expended in research and development. This policy enables us to improve our methods of operation, both chemical and mechanical; to continually maintain our equipment at the highest degree of efficiency and to develop and introduce new uses for Celanese yarns."

Meanwhile, the Celanese balance sheet reflects a sharp growth, the report said. The total assets of the company and subsidiaries was $86,170,525 on December 31, 1940 against $66,296,654 the year earlier.

Of this increase, approximately $5,000,000 represents new machinery $35,934,196 to $40,914,463 last year, the report said.

Department as a national defense poster. At a distance of ten feet, it is a remarkable portrait of Uncle Sam—held up close it becomes a group of individual people and things which go to make up the important elements in our national defense.

Stump said that a committee of approximately ten members of Cumberland Lodge No. 63 will cooperate with him in the distribution of the essay literature in the schools here while A. Charles Stewart, of Frostburg Lodge No. 470, will be in charge of a committee working in the George's creek section.

The contest here will supplant the annual Flag Day contest of which Stump has had charge the past two years.

Local Prizes $19.50

Cumberland lodge will award cash prizes of $10, $5, $2.50 and $2 in cash and in addition winners of the first three prizes will receive certificates of merit from the Grand Lodge. The three local winners will be eligible to compete in the state association contest in which prizes of $15, $10 and $5 will be awarded. Three state winners will be entered in the national competition for cash prizes totaling $1,750.

Three judges will be selected in the near future for the local contest. The deadline for the competition here has been fixed for March 31 but efforts are being made to get an extension of time. The state association deadline is April 15 and the national May 15. Announcement of the national winners will be made on or prior to June 1.

to keep him from waking up people in the adjoining neighborhood. The next day he was sent to the county jail.

Van said that liquor was given because it is prescribed by physicians. He further stated that the whisky was used because there was no anti-jag available at the police station. The police administered liquor in doses because Dr. J. K. Rozum, city physician, was in Florida, and "it would take him some time to get back to Cumberland," they said.

Van and Lovenstein took exception to the mayor's comment on removal of bond money from the police station to the city hall because it put the police in a bad light.

Money Accounted For

They agreed that every cent ever placed in the drawer has been accounted for and that no police officer can be accused of removing any money for his own use.

The two officers also stated that as much as $500 has accumulated in the drawer at one time before it was removed.

They also said that they requested Commissioner Orr to remove the money to another drawer at the police station because too much of it had been piling up at the sergeant's desk and there was a chance of it scattering all over the place every time the drawer was opened.

"We just want to make it plain," Van said, "that the money was safe at the police station and the men employed here are honest. It was not necessary to remove it to the city hall for safe keeping."

DIGGING OUT AFTER THE BLIZZARD

A snow crew makes a path for motorists near Hicksville, N. Y., through drifts which blocked many highways almost covering cars completely during a blizzard which extended over a 1,000-mile front in the middle Atlantic states and took at least twenty-three lives. Clearing skies brought a forecast of continued cold weather.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

WHY DID HE DO THAT?

TO BE A REAL bridge player, you must constantly ask yourself questions about the bids and plays made by the others—your partner as well as the opponents. If you do, you often can tell exactly what somebody else is trying to do, and hence can read his probable holding. If you don't, you may play right into the hands of the opposition.

Bidding about like that occurred at most tables of a social duplicate game, in which there was a wide range of ability.

Where there were players with no particular studious attitude toward the game, West's lead of the club K was followed by the Q—it should have been the J—and then by the J, which South ruffed.

The declarer ran three trumps, later lost to the two red aces and thus made exactly 3-Spades.

At another table, East overtook the club K with his A, laid down the diamond A and then led his club 5 to the J. West returned the club Q to be ruffed by South, and so the same 3-Spades got made at that table.

Where a bit stronger defensive players were on the job, East likewise overtook the club K with his A, laid down his diamond A and returned his club 5 to the J.

That West player, however, asked himself why his partner had laid down the diamond A before repeating the club. He decided it was because the diamond was a singleton. So he then led his diamond 6, which East ruffed.

The latter then tried his heart 4 to seek to give West the lead again. This also was successful.

After taking his heart A, West led another diamond, his 5, and East scored a second ruff. Thus the defenders had taken the first six tricks and held the declarer to a total of seven, beating the contract two tricks, solely because West asked himself why his partner had played as he did.

If West opens the bidding on this deal with 4-Diamonds and North doubles, what should East do?

House Kills Labor Relations Bill Amendments at Neely's Request

But Provision for Minority Representation on Board Retained

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 3 (AP)—Heeding a request of Governor Neely, made in a personal appearance before the Democratic majority, the House of Delegates quickly knocked out today a handful of amendments made to the much-controverted administration Labor Relations bill.

The delegates, however, amid flowery exchanges of compliments between the Democratic majority and Republican minority, voted 87 to 1 for a change allowing minority representation on the proposed three-man Labor Relations commission.

They retained, too, a minor amendment of last Saturday which Chairman Alltop (D-Marion) of the Labor committee accepted at the time.

Speaking briefly at a majority caucus, the Governor was reported to have urged reconsideration of changes made Saturday in his bill which would create a commission to guarantee collective bargaining rights in intrastate industries.

It was reported from the caucus, and later referred to on the floor, that Neely declared he believed that Republicans and Democrats over the state approved the program he outlined six weeks ago but that he was appearing only upon request and in an advisory capacity.

He also told the Democratic majority, members said, that he did not want anyone to vote himself out of office by supporting any particular thing.

As soon as the House reached the bill, which has kept it in a turmoil for three days and which has brought a threat of retaliation from labor spokesmen, reconsideration of the amendments voted Saturday was started.

The vote on rejection of the first amendment called back was 54 to 34, and others were similar.

Patriotic Note Is Emphasized At Luke School

Elaborate Program Presented by Pupils; Drum Majorettes Star

WESTERNPORT, March 3—The Luke school presented an elaborate patriotic program Friday night before a large gathering of patrons and friends of the school.

The program opened with an intricate drill by the girls of the seventh and eighth grades dressed in red, white and blue gowns, each carrying an American flag. Large pictures of Lincoln and Washington were in the background. The part of color-bearer was taken by Miss Virginia Bryan, who recited the Gettysburg address and led in the singing of "Father of the Land We Love."

This exercise was followed by an exhibit by three drum majorettes, Betty Lou Jones, Mary Di Gioia and Jean Jenkins, whose skill in whirling the baton was the feature of the program. Next came a patriotic pageant by the pupils of grades four and five. The scene was around the Statue of Liberty, impersonated by Miss Janet Randall. This was under the direction of Mrs. Kenneth Malcolm.

The patriotic note was stressed in a play entitled "For Love of Country," presented by the pupils of Miss Clementine Pearce, including Elaine Parker, Viola Meyer, Robert Nofsinger, James Duckworth, James LaRue and Robert Walkey. The program closed with a quiz on the lives of Lincoln and Washington, which was won by Betty Warnick, with Leo DiGioia, as runner-up.

Sarazen Makes Miraculous Shot in Tourney

He and Ben Hogan Win Match with 0 Foot Putt

Snead and Guldahl Coast to Easy Victory To Continue Advance

By JOHN WILDS

CORAL GABLES, Fla., March 3.—Old Gene Sarazen, the golfing farmer from Brookfield, Conn., came up with another of his miraculous shots today — an eagle on the first extra hole — to send his team into the semi-finals of the Miami Biltmore's $5,000 International four ball tournament.

His thirty-foot putt for a three on the 500-yarder came in the nick of time, cutting off a great closing drive by the dark-horse aggregation of Leonard Dodson of Springfield, Mo., and Willie Goggin of Miami.

For most of the day Sarazen's young partner, serious Ben Hogan of Purchase, N. Y., had carried the load. With some help from Sarazen he had built up a two-hole lead by the time they reached the thirty-fourth hole.

Shoot Brilliant Golf

Surprise winners yesterday over National Open Champion Lawson Little and Jimmy Demaret, the Dodson-Goggin twosome suddenly came to life. Goggin dropped a forty-foot putt for a winning birdie on the thirty-fourth and Dodson sent a great approach inches from the pin for another on the thirty-fifth, evening the match.

They halved the thirty-sixth with birdie 4's and the big gallery trooped to the first tee. Sarazen put his drive into the rough, some 225 yards from the green. A great second, with a wood club, put him on the green in two along with the other three players.

Hogan's ball lay farther from the pin, but the team decided to let Gene gamble first. It worked. Both Dodson and Goggin barely missed long putts for eagles which would have prolonged the match.

The red-hot team of Sammy Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Ralph Guldahl, former open champion from Chicago, continued a relentless advance. They coasted to 3 and 2 decision over Johnny Bulla of Chicago and Lloyd Mantrum of Oak Park, Ill.

Two Extra-hole Matches

The second extra-hole match was taken by Horton Smith of Oak Park, Ill., and Paul Runyan of White Plains, N. Y., on the thirty-ninth. They conquered the well-known combination of Byron Nelson, the Professional Golfers' Association Champion, and Harold McSpeden of Winchester, Mass.

Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., and Billy Burke of Cleveland, surprise winners last year — stayed in the running with a 3 and 2 victory over Clayton Heafner of Linville, N. C., and his pickup partner, Leo Walper of Washington who substituted for the drafted Ed Oliver of Wilmington, Del.

Tomorrow's semi-finals will send Snead and Guldahl against Smith and Runyan, and Burke and Wood against Sarazen and Hogan.

Beautiful Katie Moves In While Caplin Waits

NEW YORK, March 3.—The register says that the lightweight champion of the world, Lew Jenkins, is managed by a gentleman named Browning, but if you plan to do business with this stable, get in touch with a lady named Jenkins.

The wife of the champion, justly known as beautiful Katie, is voting most of the stock. That makes the first lady manager of consequence since Mme. Lena Levinsky, who guided the destiny of King Levinson with a firm hand and a pair of coloratura lungs.

Lady managers are good to have. They do not necessarily produce results, but they lend a certain tone to the stable, and they can be heard from forty miles away, which saves money in telephone calls, telegrams, etc.

Jenkins won his title under the management of Hymie Caplin, a fellow familiar with the ropes, as the saying goes. Not long ago they found Hymie guilty of promoting poker games in which the deck was sometimes a little colder than the temperature specified by Hymie. Mr. Caplin didn't know an ace from a deuce himself, but he knew some people who did, in spades.

Katie Has Full Charge

The upshot of the matter is that Hymie now awaits sentence to a brief term in the pound. He cannot manage Jenkins from there, and beautiful Katie, controlling her grief for Hymie with a mighty effort, has moved in.

She was in full charge of the champ's training camp before his fight with Lou Ambers last week. She saw to it that the sparring partners were bled at frequent intervals and did not overeat—what is all any sparring partner can ask for in the way of attention.

Jenkins did not fight a very good fight against Ambers, but aside from that, the arrangement is working out fine. No matter how badly Lew fights under new management, the title probably will stay in the family, for Katie herself will go out and lick the man who licks him.

There is some reason to believe that Mrs. Jenkins could whip Mr. Jenkins on the best day he ever saw.

The only thing against Katie is that she lacks the powerful vocal equipment of Mme. Levinsky. Katie can talk business with a man in the next county, but when it comes to a man in the next state, she has to use a telephone.

Mme. Levinsky had a ringside technique patterned on the work of Mrs. Rose Fitzsimmons, wife of Ruby Robert, who used to yell, "hit him in the slats, Bob!" Mme. Levinsky improved on this repertory. She was also a source of great consolation to her brother, the kingfish in his moments of adversity, which were numerous.

When the Kingfish fought Max Baer back in 1934, Lena ran the gamut. Levinsky admitted later, on regaining consciousness, that she was a comfort to him.

An Appealing Program

Baer started slowly, and Levinsky ventured to tap him on the nose, by way of experiment. This roused the blood of Mme. Lena.

"Kill him, King," she screamed. "Cut out his heart, and I'll eat it for breakfast."

This was a program which appealed to everybody, but Mr. Baer, anxious to circumvent it, Maxie banged the Kingfish on the jaw till the round ended. Between rounds, Mme. Levinsky mapped out some strategy.

"When I yell, King," she said, "look at me and I'll tell you what to do."

The second round had hardly begun when Mme. Levinsky emitted an ear-splitting holler. The Kingfish looked around to learn the next move, and Baer promptly knocked him unconscious. Mme. Levinsky revived him in the dressing-room by slapping his face till he woke up.

"I was right, King," she said, "I was just gonna tell you."

"Tell me what?" said the Kingfish, stroking his jaw.

"To watch out for his right hand," explained Lena. "He hits good with that."

"You're always right, Lena," said Mr. Levinsky, and he spoke the truth. No one has ever diagnosed the style of Baer more accurately than Mme. Levinsky did that night. Baer never fooled her for a moment.

If Katie Jenkins could yell as loud as Lena, the chances are that Jenkins, too, would get knocked out more often. It's something they can work out between them, if they stick to it.

Muskeleers Lose To North Enders

Outsourcing their opponents 6 to 2 from the field the North End Wildcats managed to nose out the Muskeleers team in a recent game played at Allegany high school 12 to 11. Good work at the foul mark kept the Muskeleers in the game. They made seven out of thirteen chances.

The lineups:
Team	G.	F.G.	Pts.
North Enders	16	4-11	36
Muskeleers	10	3-7	25

Joe Di Maggio Still Dodging Interviewers

Keeps Silent on Contract Troubles with New York Yankees

SAN FRANCISCO, March 3 (AP)—Joe Di Maggio, last holdout of the New York Yankees was still dodging interviewers in regard to his baseball contract troubles today.

Developments, one way or the other, are expected this week, it was learned. Unless Joe intends to become a genuine holdout and remain here, he should start for training camp within a few days.

Financial demands of the batting champion of the American League the last two seasons are matters probably known only by Joe, his wife and high officials of the club. The most frequent guesses are that he asked $40,000 for the 1941 season.

Has New Delivery

FT. MYERS, Fla., March 3 (AP)—Pitcher Harry Eisenstat took a tip and used his hip in experimenting with a new delivery.

The result, the Cleveland Indian said today is "more stuff on the ball and I'm concealing my delivery from the batter."

The twenty-five-year-old hurler, who played in twenty-seven games last season but was credited with only one victory, is throwing his left hip into his pitch instead of delivering from a straightaway stance, facing the batter almost squarely.

Reds Work Hard

TAMPA, Fla., March 3 (AP)—A "mid-summer" sun boiled down today as the World Champion Cincinnati Reds put emphasis in infield drill. Three groups took the field in succession.

Manager Bill McKechnie sprung a surprise in the third round, sending outfielder Dutch Mele to first. Observers wondered if this meant the Birmingham slugger might gain a berth with the regulars in a dual role. McKechnie did not comment.

Ted Williams Signs

SARASOTA, Fla., March 3 (AP)—Teddy Williams, last of the Red Sox to come into the fold, agreed to his 1941 contract today. Manager Joe Cronin said he had been informed by telephone that the Boston club's long range hitter had left Minneapolis for the training camp by automobile.

Dodgers Workout

HAVANA, March 3 (AP)—The Brooklyn Dodgers returned to practice today after their week-end series with the Giants and devoted most of the session to a batting drill. Mickey Owen, who signed his contract Sunday, took little part in the workout because he is afflicted by boils under his right arm. The affliction already has cost him twelve pounds of needed weight, he says, besides interfering with his conditioning exercises.

Cubs Get Holiday

AVAILON, Calif., March 3 (AP)—Golf and fishing occupied the Chicago Cubs today as Manager Jimmy Wilson gave his squad their first holiday since spring training began.

Wilson is happy over the condition of the players, all of whom now are signed and in camp except Hank Leiber and Bill Lee.

IT'S ALL OVER FOR AMBERS

Referee Arthur Donovan catches Lou Ambers before he reaches the canvas in the seventh and last round of his bout with Lightweight Champion Lew Jenkins in New York's Madison Square Garden. Ambers, the Herkimer, N. Y. Hurricane and one-time lightweight titleholder, announced after his technical knockout that he was through with the ring.

RAMBLING WITH ROOKIES

JOSEPH SCHULTZ
Pittsburgh Pirates

In 1932, newspapers carried an inconspicuous little item which read: "Manager Joe Schultz of the Houston Texas League Buifs gave the fans a treat not on the regular menu when he sent in his son, Joe, Jr., as a pinch-hitter in the seventh inning in the twin bill finale with Galveston, winding up the regular schedule. Junior Schultz hit a single, stole second and third, thanks to Hank Thormahlen, Galveston hurler, and later crossed the plate with a run. It was a good laugh for the crowd."

That was seven years ago. Joe Schultz, Jr., a cherubic faced boy, inclined to be plump, was fourteen. When he wasn't decked out in a miniature uniform as the Houston batboy, he was around in knee britches.

Time gallops on!

With Pittsburgh Pirates

Today, that same Joe Schultz, Jr., is on the roster of the Pittsburgh Pirates and unless there is a major upset ahead for those discerning gentlemen who are paid for judging diamond talent — this includes Joe Schultz, Sr., chief of staff of the Pittsburgh bloodhounds — Junior will go far as a catcher in the Big Time.

An unique situation took place when Joe, Sr., scouted and arranged for the purchase of his son from Houston in 1940. But young Schultz was not quite ready for the majors last spring and he was optioned to Portland of the Pacific Coast League, where he batted .325.

When Joe was born, August 29, 1918, Papa, then playing in the outfield for the St. Louis Cardinals, looked him over fondly and said to himself: "Good—he'll make a swell ball player." Joe, Sr., had the kid catching a rubber ball as soon as he was old enough to walk. Papa Schultz, down through the years, of course, was always careful not to overwork the boy. He knew that too much baseball had "burned out" other youngsters and that they did not last long after reaching maturity. Joe, Sr., was wise to all that. He watched the youngsters arm and his throwing.

Was Cardinals Mascot

In 1924, when he was only half past five years old, Joe, Jr., served as mascot for the Cardinals. Pop rigged him up in the white flannels of the Cards and Mike Gonzalez, then active as a catcher, gave him a mitt. Baby Joe's presence on the bench drove Mrs. Schultz half crazy at times, because she was afraid he'd get hurt. But it didn't do any good to talk to the father.

The youngster entered St. Louis University High School, when he had made his marks in grade school, and became a member of the school team. But Joe, Jr., usually played third base or in the outfield. It was the advice of Pater Schultz that definitely swung Junior to sportsman's Park one day early in 1935 at a tryout or test school and his father, who at that time was scouting for the Cards, was on hand as an observer.

Joe, Jr., followed instructions. When he graduated from high school in June 1936, his Dad signed him to a Cardinal farm contract and shipped him off to Albany, Ga. in the Georgia-Florida League. Junior was only seventeen then. He was sent to Kingston in the Coastal Plain League in 1937 and began to show real promise both as a hitter and receiver. His batting average was .325 for 72 games.

Sent to Columbus in 1938

He began the 1938 season with Asheville, another Cardinal farm, and after batting .310 in fifty-eight games was moved up to Columbus in the American Association. He got into fifty-seven contests with the Class AA club batting .278. Young Schultz opened the 1939 campaign with Columbus and after averaging .327 in twenty-eight was sent to Houston, where he had been a batboy in 1932. With the Texas League club, his B. A. was .296.

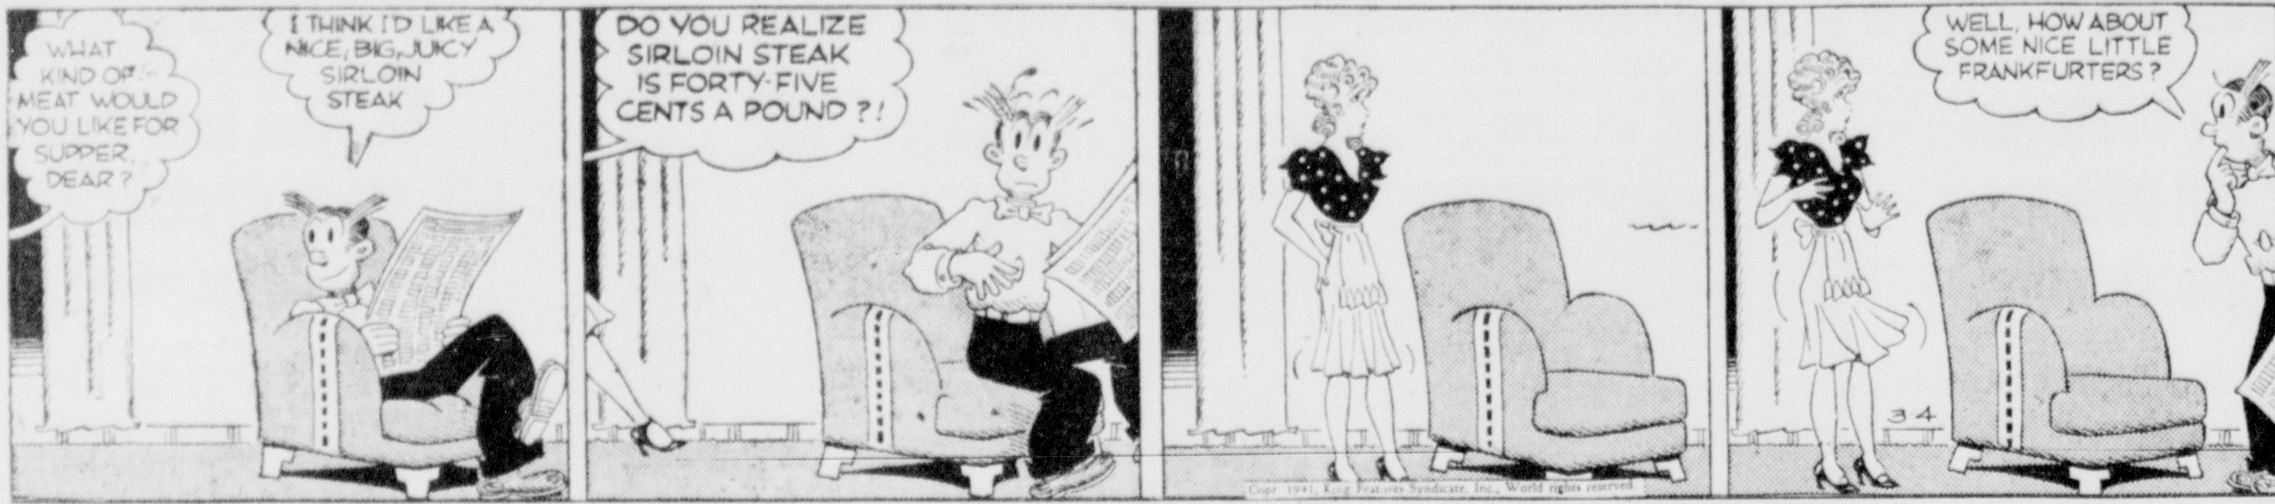

The senior Schultz had left the employ of the Cards in 1938 to become chief scout and farm supervisor for the Pirates and he was in a dilemma. Here he was working for Pittsburgh and bringing up his boy in the Cardinal chain. Something had to be done to correct this condition. So in 1940,

Col. Henry Stanwood Will Speak at Jaycee Dinner Here March 13

Selective Service Director Will Address 200 Persons; Talk Will Be Broadcast

Lieut. Col. Henry Stanwood, of Baltimore, state director of Selective Service, will address members of the Junior Association of Commerce, the American Legion and officials of the four Allegany county draft boards at a dinner meeting scheduled for Thursday, March 13, at 6 p. m., in the Central Y. M. C. A. It was announced last evening by Fred Z. Hetzel, president of the Junior Association of Commerce.

Stanwood last evening notified David Kauffman, local attorney, and chairman of the Junior Association of Commerce's Committee on Public Information, that he will positively appear here on the above date to give an address on the "Selective Service Program of Maryland."

Talk To Be Broadcast
Following the dinner, Lieut. Col. Stanwood's address will be broadcast from the Central Y. M. C. A. through the facilities of radio station WTBO from 7 to 7:30 p. m. A short question and answer period will follow the talk.

Hetzel stated last evening that invitations will be forwarded to approximately 200 persons and that the dinner probably will be served in the gymnasium of the Y. M. C. A. because the regular dining room is not large enough to accommodate the crowd.

In addition to members of the Junior Association of Commerce, invitations will be extended to all officials of the four Allegany county draft boards, the Garrett county board and members of Port Cumberland Post No. 13, American Legion.

Praises Programs Here
Hetzel stated that the local association corresponded with Lieut. Col. Stanwood in regard to information for the local radio programs and the state director not only furnished the information desired but added that he would be willing to come to Cumberland to give an address on the entire draft setup in Maryland.

Stanwood praised the Junior Association's "Public Information Programs" which were inaugurated last week with Associate Judge William A. Huster as the speaker. The programs are given to outline the rights of draftees and to acquaint

Bar Association Approves New Rules Of Civil Procedure

New Method Is Explained by Two Baltimore Attorneys

Members of the Allegany County Bar Association overwhelmingly approved the new rules of civil procedure recently promulgated by the court of appeals at a special meeting Saturday night, it was announced yesterday by George Hughes, president of the association.

Since the Allegany group is the largest bar association in the state outside of Baltimore, the Senate Judiciary committee sought its sentiments before taking action on the rules. Although the legislature does not make such regulations, it has the right to disapprove them.

The vote on the matter here was twenty-four to two, it was said.

Two Baltimore lawyers explained the rules, after which the association discussed them at length in a session lasting until 11:30 p. m. The Baltimoreans were Robert R. Bowie, appointed "reporter" by the court, and William L. Marbury Jr., a member of the committee which helped draw up the rules.

Among the changes is one which permits a judge in a civil case to sum up the evidence in his charge to the jury. It is provided, however, that the jury must be instructed that it has the sole power to determine the weight and credit to be given the testimony of witnesses.

Another new feature provides for pre-trial interrogation to simplify and expedite civil cases. The rules authorize a defendant, for example, to summon the plaintiff for questioning concerning the issues in the pending suit. Rights of all parties are carefully safeguarded, however.

The public is invited to attend.

Mercury Here Soars To 62 1-2 but Snow Today Is Prediction

Spring like weather prevailed yesterday in Cumberland when the mercury rose to its highest point since December 10, but the warm spell will be short lived, according to the weather man, who has predicted snow flurries and much colder in Western Maryland tonight and clear and colder tomorrow.

The thermometer at city hall yesterday afternoon registered fifty-two and one-half degrees, the highest the mercury has risen since December 10 when the maximum reading here was an even sixty-two degrees.

Twice last winter the mercury plunged to the zero mark but so far this season the lowest temperature recorded was three degrees above on January 4.

Officers Tell Why Liquor Was Used At Police Station

Was Given to Drunk with D.T.'s; Resent Removal of Bond Money

Members of the Cumberland police department "killed two birds with one stone" last evening by accounting for the liquor that was taken from a desk drawer in the local police station recently and announcing at the same time that they took exception to Mayor Harry Irvine's comment that money posted for bond had to be removed from the police station to the city hall for safe keeping.

Van Makes Explanation
James E. Van, acting assistant chief, and Wellington B. Lovenstein, desk sergeant, said that the liquor removed from a desk drawer was given to a drunk with the D.T.'s (delirium tremens) to quiet his nerves.

"When the drunk was brought into the police station," declared Van, "he started on a tear and had the place in an uproar. He was seeing pink elephants, snakes and many other kinds of animals and was a mess."

"Yes," chimed in Lovenstein, "that fellow was so bad he tried to climb the cell bars."

After giving him the liquor, the police said they were forced to put the drunk into the sound-proof cell.

With all elevators throughout the United States jam-packed with millions of tons of grain, the defense program makes it necessary to find new locations where grain can be

Elks Will Launch Essay Contest With Charles M. Slump in Charge

County High School Students Eligible; Local Prizes Total $19.50

Announcement of the launching of a National Patriotic Essay Contest among all public and parochial high school students of Allegany county by the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks was made last evening by Charles M. Slump, of Cumberland Lodge No. 63, sub-chairman of the State Defense Commission of the Maryland, Delaware and District of Columbia Elks Association.

Poster cards and rules governing the contest in which $1,000, $500 and $250 will be awarded by the Elks National Defense Commission in addition to prizes given by the local lodge and State association, will be distributed to the various high schools of the county upon their arrival here, Slump said.

This patriotic contest is unique in that it calls for an analysis of the painting of Uncle Sam in addition to the writing a 300 to 500 word essay on "What Uncle Sam Means to Me."

Modern Woodmen Start Ball Rolling With $100 Gift to Chest Campaign

Based on information received from the National Defense Advisory Commission supplemented by local inquiry, the Maryland Council of Defense and Resources has issued a warning to the unemployed, especially youths against being exploited by newly created schools promising big jobs in defense industries.

"There can be no doubt," said Isaac S. George, executive director, "that private commercial schools are springing up in many parts of the country with little other purpose than to exploit the unemployed, particularly youths, and it further appears that some such enterprises exist in Maryland, hence, this warning."

"These so-called schools in most cases are unlicensed, have inadequate equipment, are not supervised, advertise widely and vigorously, charge stiff fees and promise big jobs in industry. Cases of misguided families making sacrifices for the sake of a son or sons at times approaches the tragic."

"It should be remembered," George continued, "that Congress has voted money liberally to establish vocational training for work in defense industries, that some Baltimore schools are operating twenty-four hours a day, that the movement is well spread throughout the state and that the courses are comprehensive. In short, there are tens of thousands being trained without expense to them through the public schools and the National Youth Administration."

"It is only fair to say that we are not in any sense criticizing the establishment of schools that now and in the past have engaged a good reputation. There is, of course, a place for private training for a proper price if the individual pre-

Celanese Is Hit Sharply by Tax Rise during Year

Annual Report Shows Net Is Held Down Despite Increased Sales

Despite the fact the gross income of the Celanese Corporation of America rose in 1940 compared to 1939, the rising tide of taxation held the net at virtually the same level as 1939, the annual report of the company revealed yesterday.

The Celanese tax bill in 1940 was more than double the 1939 figure rising from $2,363,782 to $5,424,954, the report showed. In 1939 the taxes on income were more than double the taxes for 1938.

The net income last year was $6,376,896, a gain of only $2,796 over the 1939 figure. Based on 1,112,788 common shares, the income was equal to $3.38 per share for the years 1939 and 1940, the report said. Taxes were equal to $4.86 per share in 1940 and $2.12 in 1939.

Net Sales Up
Net sales for 1940 were about $44,000,000, or an increase of about $9,000,000 compared to 1939. While this sales boost represents a twenty-five per cent increase, it was pointed out that practically the whole benefit goes to the tax collector.

Without this phenomenal increase in sales, the corporation would be back of 1939 after paying taxes, it was disclosed.

It was also expected that, judging from expert advice on the situation,

MAN IS JAILED HERE ON WIFE'S COMPLAINT HE USED FALSE NAME

George William Giles, 35, formerly of Fairmont, W. Va., was committed to the county jail yesterday in default of $500 bond, when he waived a hearing in trial magistrates court on a charge of perjury.

He was accused of using a fictitious name when he married the former Virginia Jones, a Rideley, W. Va., girl last November 4 in this city. Giles, employed at a local store, was first arrested last week after he allegedly attacked his wife in a Front street beer parlor. She was treated at Allegany hospital for a broken nose and appeared in court today with her nose bandaged. Giles was fined $5 last Friday in police court on a disorderly conduct charge.

Giles gave his name as Homer Lester Evans when he married the girl, she testified when questioned by Terrence J. Boyle, county investigator. The girl's sister-in-law "tipped her off" about Giles' right name, it was brought out. She also testified that Giles had been released last July from West Virginia state prison, where she said he served a term for a gas station holdup, she stated.

A discussion on the topic, "City, State and Federal Government" will feature the semi-monthly dinner meeting of the Cumberland Business and Professional Women's Club today at 5:30 p. m., in the Port Cumberland hotel.

The speakers, all members of the club, will be Miss Myra M. Nefflen, principal of Cresaptown Junior high school; Miss Christine Porter, principal of Gephart school, Cumberland; and Mrs. Elizabeth Matheny Smith, teacher of social studies and English at Cresaptown Junior high school.

The discussion will be in regard to how city, state and federal government play their part in "Making Democracy Work," the annual theme adopted by the club.

Miss Lillian C. Compton, as assistant superintendent of Allegany county public schools, and chairman of the education committee of the local club, will preside.

Allegany County Polio Fund Sets All-Time Record

Conlon Announces $1,533 Was Contributed during Campaign

Allegany county citizens contributed the all-time record sum of $1,533 this year in the campaign to fight infantile paralysis, Thomas F. Conlon, chairman of the President's Birthday Committee announced yesterday.

This year's contributions exceeded the $1,333.77 raised in 1940 and the $1,305.93 received the preceding year, Conlon said. The city finance commissioner served as chairman of the campaign in 1940 and 1941 while H. B. Naughton, former manager of radio station WTBO was in charge of the drive for funds in 1939.

Felix R. Brady, Jr., and William J. Edwards this year served as auditors, Charles George was secretary and Miss Henrietta Schwarzenbach, treasurer.

Topping the contributions was $576.45 from residents of Cumberland, followed by $367.39 raised in the Cumberland theaters.

Longserving's share $122.77 trailed closely by the town of Luke with contributions totaling $105.79.

Other receipts were as follows: Frostburg, $59.33; President's ball, $52.50; Westernport and McCoole, $46.45; Jackson Day Dinner, $40.85; Mt. Savage, $33.01; Clarysville, $24.10; Eckhart, $21.43; Barton, $20.85; Cresaptown, $15.17; Eilerslie, $12.74; Oldtown, $10.71; Midland, $7.04; Corriganville, $5.85; Vale Summit, $5.51; Oldtown, $5.05.

Kiwanians Will Hear Talk on Rubber by Edmund S. Burke

Edmund S. Burke, president of the Kelly-Springfield Tire Company, will be the guest speaker at the regular weekly dinner meeting of the Kiwanis club, Thursday, at 12:15 p. m., in the Port Cumberland hotel.

In view of the fact that Mr. Burke is in a position to know the inside of the rubber industry his talk on "The Romance of a Stolen Seed," should be of special interest, particularly at the time when rubber is playing such a strategic part in the national defense program.

Mrs. W. D. Byron Would Accept Nomination

Widow of Representative Believes She Could Carry On His Work

Local friends of Mrs. William D. Byron, of Williamsport, widow of the Sixth district representative who lost his life in an airplane accident last Thursday near Atlanta, Ga., were apprised last night that she would accept the Democratic nomination for her husband's House seat.

It was understood that Mrs. Byron has no political ambitions but that she would like to complete the term for which her husband was elected. She feels, it is said, that because of her personal aid given her husband in his legislative work she would be able to continue it as he would have continued it.

Local Democratic leaders stated yesterday that in view of this attitude by Mrs. Byron there is no likelihood of a contest for the party nomination.

When this and the Republican nomination will be made depends upon the actions of the state central committees of the respective parties, which under state law are required to nominate one candidate each for a special election to be called by the governor. Thus far neither group has taken steps toward a nominating session.

The only date specified with regard to a special election is that the governor is required to set the date twenty days after the nominations are made. No word has been received from Governor O'Connor as to when the special election will be called.

Thus far, Mrs. Byron is the only candidate in the field for the special election to select a successor to her late husband. Several possibilities have been mentioned on the Republican side but nothing definite has resulted except, as already noted in press dispatches, Walter Johnson, famous baseball player of Montgomery county, has stated he does not intend to be a candidate. Johnson was the Republican nominee in the last election for Mr. Byron's seat.

The committee took no action, but some members said the name of William Preston Lane, Jr., of Hagerstown, former attorney general, was among those brought up.
